B.A.T. IS TO PAY TAX IN LUMP SUM TO PEKING, REPORT

Pact Calls For Annual Levy Of $1,200,000, Says Capital Gossip

TO SHIFT BUREAU HEADS

Powerful Factors At Work To Replace Present Chief, Shou-lin

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, May 30.—Drafts of an agreement looking to the payment of a lump sum by the British American Tobacco Company in lieu of set internal revenue taxes, are said to be ready for signing at an early date. The agreement was proposed last night at a conference between Chang Shou-ling, Director-General of the Wine and Tobacco Administration and officials of the Tobacco concern. It was proposed that for the next ten years the company pay an annual tax of $1,200,000. This, it is said, will lessen the work of keeping track of accounts in various provinces and the Central Government will get all the money. The final conference is to be called shortly, Chinese tobacconists in Shanghai and other points have protested to the Government against this agreement saying it discriminates against them.

Peking, May 29.—In Chinese official circles it is stated that there must and soon will be a change in the direction of the Tobacco and Wine Administration. Not only are powerful factors in the Government at work to oust the present incumbent, Chang Shou-lin, so as to create a vacancy for their own man but strong pressure is also being brought to bear upon the Government for the removal of Director-General Chang by those who for commercial or patriotic reasons desire to see the Tobacco and Wine Administration, one of the country's largest sources of revenue, developed into an efficient revenue-collecting organisation along the lines of the Salt Gabelle. The last-named opponents of the present regime maintain that the Chinese themselves can effect a complete reorganisation of the Administration along efficient business lines, but that, in order to accomplish this, the Government must first remove Director Chang Shou-ling and his satellites in the Administration.

Chang Shou-ling has been in charge of the Tobacco and Wine Revenue Service for nearly three years, and his many opponents claim that during this time he has not initiated one constructive measure for the development and standardisation of the taxes from the production and sale of tobacco and wine. The revenue service in the various provinces is, as it used to be, in chaotic condition, subject solely to the vagaries of the tax-farmers appointed by Director Chang and his agents. And not only are the tobacco-growers and the tobacco dealers in a constant state of irritation and uncertainty ov the taxes that they are obliged to pay but the Central Government is receiving far less revenue than it should be getting owing to the extensive squeeze methods that are in vogue both in the provinces and the central office of the Tobacco and Wine Administration.

Last year's estimated revenues from the Tobacco and Wine taxes were nearly $30,000,000, but the actual amount turned into the Central Government by the Administration was hardly over 15,000,000. And this from a revenue that could be made to produce from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 for the Government under ordinarily efficient and loyal management.

Such efficiency of management was guaranteed to the Government under the Pacific Development Contract of December, 1919 but Chang Shou-ling's opposition to the contract broke the arrangement and killed any prospect of introducing efficient methods into his Administration. Last Winter other plans were brought forward to modernise the Tobacco and Wine Service and develop the revenue from it, but these plans were likewise defeated by Director Chang.

Hitherto it has proved impossible to remove Chang and his friends from the Administration owing to the support given to Chang by the President, who served with him in Manchuria under the Manchu regime. Now, however, the presidential support for Chang is weakening under pressure from the Chinese bankers and other influential commercial and official groups, who are receiving the sympathy of foreigners interested in the Tobacco and Wine Revenue Service.

JAP ELECTION AT TSINGTAO STIRS UP EXCITEMENT

Honorary Councillors Hope To Improve Trade Conditions

(China Press Correspondence)

Tsingtao, May 24.—The election of fifty Japanese citizens as honorary councilors was held last Sunday. The excitement reminded one of an old time presidential election like that, say, of Cleveland in 1884. One explanation of this newly formed body is that financial conditions for many months have become worse, and in their distress these citizens are taking some pronounced measures to remedy trade conditions. If this be true, this council has a very interesting time ahead of it. At present this body will serve without pay, operating only with the powers of a chamber of commerce, and that after the expected internationalisation of this port, the members will perhaps be given some civil powers.

With the month of March the opium trade was supposed to abate; with that revenues fell off, and about that time some two hundred civil employes were discharged and returned to Japan, so it was said. Previous to this change in the open trade in opium, it was necessary for the purchaser to pay Three Yen for the privilege. At present, so it is said, one desiring to buy merely signs a blank giving name, age, location, etc., and then he is allowed to purchase on the Q. T. all he desires, or all his financial ability will allow. In this way the holders of the drug have a record of prospective customers, the buyer is saved the annoyance of paying out the extra Three Yen, and the trade suffers nothing from lack of buyers. So clandestinely, it seems, it goes merrily on.

Premier To Consult Commons On Pact

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 30.—Replying to a question by Mr. Neil Maclean in regard to the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese treaty, in the House of Commons today, Mr. Lloyd George said he could add nothing to the reply given by Mr. Chamberlain on the subject on the 11th inst.

Mr. Maclean asked whether the Government intended to withhold information from the House until the arrangement had been signed and ratified. The Premier replied that the House would have the whole information laid before it.

Replying to Commander Kenworthy, the Prime Minister said he thought there would be many opportunities for discussion before the treaty was finally ratified.

NON CHRISTIANS IN PHILIPPINES FAVOR U.S. RULE

Igorrotes Inform General Wood They Prefer To Wait

GABALDEN'S NEW PLAN

Resident Commissioner At Washington Has Probationary Scheme

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Manila, May 22 (by mail).—The attitude of the non-Christian tribes of the Philippines toward the independence question is gradually being revealed to the Wood-Forbes mission, which took great pains to ascertain the sentiment of the hill people of Northern Luzon during the recent inspection tour in that portion of the island.

A delegation of Igorrotes, from the region around Baguio and Bontoc, informed General Wood that they preferred to remain under American sovereignty. Details of the meeting have not been made public, but it is intimated that certain actions of a recent governor of the province, who is now under investigation at Manila caused the Igorrotes to make their statements to the mission.

Leaders among the Iluga tribes, most of whom are pagans, informed General Wood that they desired American rule for the present; at least until their people had been sufficiently well educated to govern themselves locally. After that, they stated, they were willing to live under either Filipino or American sovereignty.

Mr. Gabalden, who has been urging this locally with the chiefs of the Nacionalista party, plans to present it to Congress upon his return to the United States.

The Jones Law, which is sometimes referred to as the Philippine constitution, provides in the preamble that independence shall be granted to the Islands "as soon as a stable government shall be established." It is impossible to decide when this condition has been attained, Mr. Gabalden thinks, so long as American officials and troops remain in the Philippines.

Mr. Gabalden would remove the present uncertainty by having the United States withdraw her forces provisionally from the Philippines for a term of four or five years, reserving the right, however, to return at the end of that time if the Filipinos had not met the test successfully. In no other way, he thinks, can an accurate judgment be formed as to the stability of Filipino rule.

Mr. Gabalden also urges a widespread campaign of publicity throughout the United States on behalf of the Filipinos. As the Government some time ago passed an act appropriating one million pesos annually for this purpose, it is thought likely that this campaign will be put into effect.

Mr. Forbes found that considerable progress had been made by the non-Christians since his term of office as Governor-General ended seven years ago. Many of the Igorrote girls who were pupils in the schools at that time are now teaching. Head-hunting has virtually died out, although it is true that few cases were reported during Mr. Forbes's governorship. The custom of dog-eating is still observed by most of the Igorrotes who can afford to indulge in this luxury, but it is practised less openly than before.

The Mohammedan problem will be studied in detail by the mission when it makes its inspection of the department of Mindanao and Sulu, probably in June. This is admittedly much more important than that connected with the wild tribes of Luzon, as the Mohammedans or Moros are more numerous, and have waged war on the Christian parts of the Philippines at frequent intervals up to the time of the American occupation. They also inhabit some of the richest territory in the archipelago, the resources of which have hardly been touched.

Manila, May 22 (by mail).—Mr. Isaure Gabalden, resident commissioner of the Philippines in the American Congress, who returned here recently on a vacation trip from Washington, is the father of a plan to secure "probational independence" for the inlands.

JAPANESE ENVOY IN LONDON SAYS PRINCE IS REAL

Embassy Officials Call Story Of Impersonation Absurd

TOKIO ALSO DENIES IT

Visitor Arrives At Havre And Lauds French In Message

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 30.—The rumour in regard to the impersonation of the Japanese Crown Prince is officially denied at the Japanese Embassy, where it is described as absurd. It is pointed out that Count Chinda and Baron Hayashi are well acquainted with the Crown Prince, and the fact that the King welcomed Prince Hirohito on his arrival proves the rumour to be without foundation.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, May 31.—The suggestion regarding Crown Prince Hirohito, originating in the Church Times in England, has not been published here, the Kokusai News Agency having declined, after consultation with the leading publicists, to circulate the story.

The publication of this rumor is especially regrettable because it appeared in an English church organ and in a London newspaper on the day of the departure of Britain's royal guest. The unanimous opinion of officials and publicists here is that such a canard is not deserving of notice. Crown Prince Hirohito is as well known by sight to the public of Japan as the Prince of Wales is in England.

The Hague, May 30.—After paying an official visit to Queen Wilhelmina, the Japanese Crown Prince will remain in Holland incognito for several days.

Brussels, May 30.—The Cabinet has decided to raise the Belgian Legation in Japan to the rank of an Embassy.

Havre, May 30.—On his arrival here Prince Hirohito issued a message to the French nation in which he says: "I am extremely moved at coming into touch with the noble land of France, for I am about to become better acquainted with a country which is ever finding means of adding to the high renown it has gained by its past history in all parts of the world.

"I know the feelings of the French people for the Japanese, and I can say that the Japanese regard the French with the same cordial sympathy. France is not unknown to me, for in my youth I was entrusted to the care of a French tutor. Thanks to his guidance, I understood that the gulf which appears to separate the French and Japanese cultures is not impassable. Poetry, the arts and the moral virtues of the soldier and civilian are so many bridges whereby the two civilisations—French and Far Eastern—can cross to meet one another.

"I am also aware that France does not confine her activity to speculative studies, but exerts it also in all branches of modern life. This magnificent harbor, the result of many centuries of labor, strikingly proves what French genius can accomplish in the domain of industry. I can hardly restrain my impatience to see the various aspects of French life, and feel I shall not be disappointed. Great will be my joy if, thanks to this educational tour, I am able to aid in drawing nearer the friendly relations which unite our two countries—relations which are equally profitable to both nations."

British Creditors Make Loan To Road

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, May 31.—The British-Chinese Corporation has made a credit to the Peking-Mukden Railway for doubling the line from Tangshan to Shanhaikuan. It is estimated that the work will take about a year and will cost $7,000,000. The Cabinet approved the arrangement on May 21.

The credit, which will be drawn upon monthly, according to the progress of the work, will be secured by the net earnings of the Peking-Mukden Railway after existing obligations have been met. Work will begin on June 2, and materials will be purchsed by public tender.

BRITISH CREDIT PLAN EXTENDED TO FAR EAST

House Of Commons Passes Resolutions Authorising New Conditions

£26,000,000 AVAILABLE

To Be Used Only When Banks Fail To Meet Demands Of Traders

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 31.—The House of Commons last night passed resolutions authorising the extension of the Government's credits and insurances scheme to all parts of the Empire and British possessions in the Far East, which, the Prime Minister stated, required a certain amount of consideration, owing to the conditions under which outstanding obligations had not been fully honored.

It was, he said, undesirable that credit facilities should be extended if they in any way prevented traders from discharging their full obligations. The decision of the Department of Overseas Trade as regards India and the Far East had been taken after consulting bankers and the India and Colonial Offices, and the scheme would not be extended to those places until the conditions were such as would obviate these differences. He emphasised that it was only when the banks did not take up business that the Government would step in. The scheme was, therefore, entirely supplementary.

Note.—The Government scheme, as already stated in a recent cablegram, provides that the £26,000,000 already authorised for the grant of credits in foreign countries shall become available for guaranteeing drafts against shipments to various parts of the Empire.

Ozaki Strong For Armament Parley

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, May 30.—Mr. Ozaki, Japan's protagonist of disarmament, interviewed by the Kokusai Agency, expressed enthusiasm in regard to the reception given to the arguments favoring the limitation of armaments. Since February 21, he has addressed some 60 meetings, of which 90 percent have accorded him overwhelming support.

He is delighted to learn that the American Senate has unanimously adopted the disarmament resolution, and said that, should the President call a conference, the proposal must be accepted by the Japanese Government, because, "no Cabinet in Japan dare oppose the clearly manifested national sentiment," which, says Mr. Ozaki, is fully alive to the necessity for saving civilisation from the disaster which must inevitably come if the system of rival armaments is continued.

LLOYD GEORGE DENIES 'FORCE' PLAN TO END COAL STRIKE

Premier Says He Did Not Contemplate Compulsion

MINERS VOTING

Lanarkshire Men Reject Government's Latest Scheme

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 30.—The first district meeting of miners in Lanarkshire has rejected the Government scheme, not a single vote being given in favor of arbitration.

The Scottish and South Wales Miners' Executives have recommended the rejection of the Government's proposals.

As the result of the statement made by representatives of the miners on Saturday, it was universally understood that the Government contemplated compulsory arbitration in the event of the parties failing to come to an agreement. Hence, a sensation was caused in the House of Commons today when Mr. Lloyd George denied that he had informed the Miners' Executive that if they did not accept the Government's proposals legislation would be passed to compel them to submit the dispute to arbitration.

The Premier added that the words "compulsory arbitration" were not even mentioned in the whole proceedings. He hoped that at the future conference no unauthorised communications would be sent to the press.

Bid For Armament Conference Not Yet Sent To England

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 30.—In the House of Commons today, replying to Commander Kenworthy with regard to the American Senate having passed the Borah resolution, authorising the President to invite Great Britain and Japan to join the United States in a disarmament conference, Mr. Lloyd George said he had not yet received an invitation from President Harding to attend a conference on the limitation of naval armaments.

Replying to a question as to whether meanwhile further British naval construction could be stopped, the Prime Minister said he did not think that could be done anywhere in the world. Everything would depend on whether the Borah resolution were put into operation.

Commander Kenworthy suggested that, in view of the strength of Great Britain's naval position, she could afford to lead the way in stopping construction.

Viscount Curzon pointed out that the Borah resolution did not refer to ships now being constructed. Mr. Lloyd George agreed with him.

The victims include a lawyer, named Hobbs, of Houston, who has been counsel in several negro divorce cases, and also a white doctor of Beaumont.

Pan-Pacific Association Holds Its Annual Meeting

Organisation's Activities Reviewed By Yang Tcheng; Consul-General Speaks

Over 200 attended the second annual meeting of the Pan-Pacific Association last night at the Great Eastern Hotel. Mr. Yang Tcheng, former Commissioner of Foreign Affairs of Shanghai and vice-president of the association, presided.

The principal speakers were Mr. E. S. Cunningham, the United Sates Consul-General; Mr. Osias, Philippine delegate to the Far Eastern Games; Mr. E. S. Little, the Australian Trade Commissioner and Dr. C. T. Wang, chairman of the Good Roads Movement.

In addition to Dr. J. Ross, Canadian Trade Commissioner, and Mr. Edward I. Ezra, the following board of directors was re-elected: Drs. Fong F. Sec., T. H. Lee, and Wu Ting-fang, Messrs. A. Bassett, H. B. Campbell, K. P. Chen, M. Y. Chung, G. S. F. Kemp, E. S. Little, W. W. Lockwood, C. C. Nieh, Y. C. Tong, C. T. Wang, K. S. Wong, and C. P. Yin. Tang Shao-yi, president: H. Middleton, A. Bassett, C. T. Wang, Yang Tcheng, vice-presidents; F. J. Raven, treasurer and G. A. Fitch, secretary.

The meeting also decided to have a special student membership of one dollar, and to hold prize-essay contests for students of any Pacific nationality, either in English or Chinese, on subjects relating to the Pacific or Pan-Pacific ideals. Prizes of $50, $25, $15, etc., are to be awarded to the winners.

MR. CUNNINGHAM SPEAKS

Mr. Cunningham strongly endorsed the creed of the Pan Pacific Union. He stated that it is one of the most excellent organisations which it has been his good fortune to come in touch with. Its scope is almost boundless as it includes all races and nations bordering on the Pacific Ocean. It tends to aid and assist all Pacific communities to a better understanding and development of their resources and to increase commercial intercourse between them. He particularly commended the work of the Shanghai Association in respect to road building and expressed the opinion that no other improvement would develop the country so rapidly as the construction of good highways. He stated that he had long been an advocate of road building and believed it would be an even greater advantage to China than railroad construction. If roads were constructed additional transportation facilities would be provided. 'markets for new products would be found, land value would increase and the purchasing power of the people would be greatly augmented.

He expressed the hope that the Association would establish a Museum of Natural Resources of China and stated that if such a museum were established the products displayed would be diversified and limited only by the known products of the soil because the climatic conditions and fertility of the soil makes it possible for China to rival any part of the world in almost any product.

He also suggested the importance of establishing a tourist bureau as he was under the impression that printer's ink would do wonders toward making known to the world China's natural resources.

In closing Mr. Cunningham stated that he wished the Pan Pacific Association every success under this creed and the Shanghai branch particularly.

CHAIRMAN'S ADDRESS

The address of the Chairman was as follows:

"The Pan Pacific Association is not a branch of the Pan Pacific Union of Honolulu, but it is closely affiliated with the Union. The purpose of the Union if we can state it in a nutshell is to assist those in all Pacific countries to understand each other better. The purpose of our association is to bring about closer relations between the people of China and the people of all countries bordering on the Pacific.

"The entertainment committee is particularly charged with furthering this good fellowship in Shanghai, and during the year just ending it has been responsible for a number of tiffin gatherings at which have come together the nationals of the principal nations of the Pacific.

"The publicity committee, of which Mr. Fitch is chairman, has co-operated with each of the other committees in making their activities better known to the general public. Through this committee the association has been able to publish a hand book on China entitled: "China, A Source Book of Information," which will shortly be on sale. A bibliography of important books on China is in process of preparation.

"One of our most important activities during the past year has been the encouragement of the building of roads to places of interest in China. Our roads committee under the chairmanship of Dr. C. T. Wang has been extremely active in working out a good roads program. In fact in February the roads committee secured the consent of the association to organise itself into the "Good Roads Movement" which was successfully launched on May 4, 1921.

"The tourist bureau committee under the chairmanship of Mr. Middleton of the Shanghai Nanking Railway, has been working toward the raising of funds to support a tourist bureau.

"The educational committee under the chairmanship of Dr. Fong F. Sec, was not called into being until the executive committee meeting on February 28, 1921, chiefly in recognition of the need of such a committee to look after the matter of Chinese students going abroad and the recently enacted legislation which permits Chinese to enter America on a self-supporting basis and the desire of Hawaii to have 20,000 Chinese students for the Pan-Pacific University, recruited from the laboring and middle classes.

"As originally planned it was not intended to have any membership dues, but last December we realised that it would be necessary to have a steady income in order to carry on our work and we decided to have three classes of membership: Regular membership at $2 a year; special membership at $10 a year and contributing membership at $50 a year. The membership committee reports an actual enrolment of about 250."

The A. D. C.

It was kindly and considerate of the A.D.C. to give up their date last week in favor of the Waring Company, and their delayed performance of "Belinda" last night was a pleasing one.

This play by Mr. A. A. Milne is an airy little trifle which lends itself quite easily to amateur treatment, making no heavy demands upon any of the small cast of six persons taking part in it. The production was charming, the two scenes of "Mrs. Tremayne's garden" and "a cosy room in Mrs. Tremayne's cottage in Devonshire" being put on with all the care and taste that experience of A.D.C. production never disappoints in.

Mrs. Tremayne, "Belinda," was played by Mrs. Worcester whose youthful charm and good looks were more than enough excuse for the main occupation of her life in listening to proposals.

In the first Act Mrs. Tremayne did not quite get her grip of things, so it seemed to me, but I think this was owing to the inevitable crowd of late comers who came trooping in with the usual disturbing effect to everyone but themselves.

As the play progressed Mrs. Worcester gained self assurance and gave a very happy and charming rendering of the much-proposed-to Belinda.

Miss Catherine Maitland as Delia was a very matter-of-fact sensible young lady of eighteen for whom any Spring poet would cut his hair and take to business without regret, I think.

Miss Maitland is to be congratulated on doing her work in a natural way, and did it well.

Mr. B. Lawrie Smith as Claude Devenish (the aforesaid poet) was most diverting, especially before he visited the club (the Toilet one) and provided much amusement.

He received a lot of applause at his exit on announcing that "The Prime Minister left the House," but unlike the P. M.'s we are acquainted with, he had cut his hair by this time.

Prime Ministers don't. It's not done!

Mr. Eric Prince as Professor Baxter had plenty to do and amused everyone with his dry manner, in fact his method and humor were admirably calculated as a foil to the Spring poet's.

Mr. H. E. Muriel was the long lost husband John Tremayne, who apparently strangled lions before breakfast as a matter of course, though why Milne, the writer of Belinda, should think it necessary to make any of his people strangle a lion in order to get a scar on his forearm, I really don't know.

I should have thought any ordinary sized mole would disappear after being mauled by a lion, still as I haven't a mole and I haven't been mauled, I expect Mr. Milne knows best.

Lastly, a word of appreciation to Betty (a maid) played by Mrs. H. W. Allison. I am always interested in Bettys.

The last one I gave a notice to lived in Hongkew Park, and may live there still unless she has escaped again to assist in the Olympics.

Mrs. Allison's Betty (a maid) was very nicely done and I am sorry she was too shy to take her call with the others at the end of the evening.

She did appear for a moment and then, lo! Betty escaped.

(Surely Mrs. Allison doesn't read the Budget—section—Public Parks?)

The music of the British Amateur Orchestra received much well deserved applause and added greatly to the pleasure of the audience during the acts.

I should really like to say a special word of congratulation to the man responsible for "laying out" and printing the program.

The work was done by "The Shanghai Times" and, to my mind, is one of the neatest and freshest looking programs I have ever seen.

I don't know a soul connected with that printing office but I think it is due to whoever was responsible for carrying out the design, to say how excellently it was done.

A pretty play, prettily produced, well acted, and a pretty program.

W. Bruce Lockhart.

Nanking School To Aid Sericulture

(China Press Correspondence)

Nanking, May 30.—By the union of the Nanking Branch of International Committee for the Improvement of Sericulture of China and the Department of Sericulture, College of Agriculture, National South-Eastern University, progress has been made remarkably fast. A ground covering an area of 200 mou has just been bought by the Committee for the purpose of establishing a sericultural experiment station.

It is planned to equip the whole ground by constructing a number of sericulture halls both for research and for experimentation and by planting domestic and foreign varieties of mulberry nursery trees.

Denniston Company Suit Opens In British Court

Harry Neville, Former Advance Agent, Claims Money Is Due Him From Directors

Hearing of the suit of Mr. Harry Neville, formerly advance manager of the Reynolds Denniston dramatic company, against directors of the company opened yesterday in the British Supreme Court before Judge Skinner Turner. In the action the plaintiff is seeking to recover back salary and expenses incurred on a tour of the company through northern China which he alleges to be due. Mr. H. D. Rodger is appearing for the plaintiff in the case and Messrs. J. G. Priestwood and H. Browett for the defendants.

The opening hearing was adjourned after opposing counsel had presented preliminary statements and after several witnesses had been heard.

In opening the case for plaintiff Mr. Rodger said that in the latter part of 1919 plaintiff had an interview in New York with Mr. Reynolds Denniston as the result of which he agreed to come to the Orient as advance manager for the company, and also to play certain parts in the company. Accordingly he left New York on December 31, 1919 and landed in Shanghai on February 1, 1920. On February 3, an agreement was signed between plaintiff and Reynolds Denniston, Ld.

Plaintiff then entered upon his duties, he said, and so continued until February of this year, when it was ascertained that the company was in financial difficulties. The members of the company were notified of this on their return to Shanghai about that time by Mr. Shepherd. Plans were discussed as to what procedure should be adopted and eventually the players agreed to undertake a northern tour, on the basis of a 40 percent cut in their wages, their expenses home to be paid on their return to Shanghai. Plaintiff at first refused but ultimately agreed to accept this also. At that time he maintained G.$600 was due to him in back salary and he had applied for this. Plaintiff preceded the company on the northern tour and acted as advance manager.

Plaintiff was then called and gave evidence in corroboration of counsel's opening statement. His salary, he said, was fixed at G.$75 a week. Players were usually paid nightly when they played. When the northern tour was agreed to, he understood more money had been paid into the company by the directors. Ultimately the company was disbanded at Shanghai on April 5, and the other members of the company left for home on April 6.

Witness, said he, received a day's notice to leave and when offered his passage home could not accept it as Mr. Shepherd refused to deal with the question of back salary and witness could not pay his expenses in town. Later, through his lawyer, he was informed that the accounts of the northern trip had not been included in the accounts of the company as the directors had financed it at a loss, which was not being put forward as a claim against the company.

Cross-examined, he denied that he had ever been told he was to be paid on a nightly basis on the northern tour.

In the afternoon Mr. Priestwood opened the case for the defence. An offer of a passage home, he said, had been made to plaintiff, not as charity but as a gift. Defendants had carried out their legal obligation to plaintiff, who threw the whole matter into the hands of his lawyer. Mr. McBain had put his hand into his pocket for $400 or $500 as a gift to the players. Plaintiff really had tried to get too much.

Mr. C. E. Shepherd, another director, said the Company was formed on the suggestion of Reynolds Denniston. The position of the Company was very precarious when they returned to Shanghai. There was no money in hand. The directors decided to go into liquidation. The players met the directors and as a result of negotiations the northern tour was arranged.

Mr. Neville, he said, thoroughly understood he was going on the basis of a player. Witness had charge of the financial part of the tour. Plaintiff made no complaint at Peking, but at Tientsin he said he had come north as an advance manager and on being told of the previous arrangement, said: "Well, I quit." Another member of the Company told plaintiff he was wrong. He did not quit, witness advising him not to be foolish. Plaintiff later refused his passage home as the question of his back salary could not be dealt with.

The northern tour resulted in a profit which was expended on passages. The balance was paid by the directors personally.

Cross-examined—Any advance work plaintiff did on the northern tour was by arrangement with the other players. Any profit after paying full salaries and expenses, would have gone to the old Company.

The hearing was then adjourned.

Horticultural Society Has Colorful Display Of Blooms At Flower Show

Number Of Exhibits Shown Smaller Than In Former Years Due To Recent Unfavorable Weather Conditions; Continues Through Today

Despite handicaps imposed by recent unfavorable weather conditions the Spring Flower Show of the Shanghai Horticultural Society which opened yesterday afternoon at the Town Hall and will continue through today bids fair to measure well up to the standards of exhibitions of other years. Though exhibits are not so numerous as in preceding years the showing of varicolored blooms that fills the big auditorium of the Town Hall is fairly representative and is attractive in every detail.

Roses in particular have felt the ill effects of unfavorable weather and evidence of this is to be seen in the small number of blooms shown. Among the notable exhibits of the show are fine specimens of trained nasturtiums and geraniums and besides these are excellent collections of fuschias, carnations, calceolarias, azaleas and hydrangeas.

Thirteen exhibitors are competing in the table decoration contest which is being decided by popular vote. The table displays are altogether striking and artistic and form one of the outstanding features of the exhibition.

In the vegetable section are a number of excellent displays and in particular specimens of strawberries shown probably excel anything before exhibited. Mr. J. Ambrose was awarded first prize for this exhibit. Ferns and evergreens are fairly well represented in the general display.

Bishop Graves Delivers Eloquent Memorial Day Address At Sungkiang

Owing to pressure of space publication of the following eloquent address delivered by Bishop F. R. Graves at Sungkiang on Memorial Day had to be postponed until today.

We Americans are met here this morning to observe Memorial Day. Some of you are old enough to remember the time when it was instituted. It was at first called "Decoration Day," because it was the adoption by our people generally of the custom which at the beginning was an expression of the pious remembrance by individuals of their dead soldiers, of visiting the cemeteries and decorating with flowers the graves of those who fell in the Great Civil War. Later the day became a national day and was called "Memorial Day." Then followed the war with Spain and the celebration was given a wider meaning to include the commemoration of all soldiers and sailors who died in the service of the United States; and the interest in this anniversary has been further deepened by the World War in which so many of the sons of our country gave up their lives.

In this commemoration there are two thoughts which are combined; the first is the great thought of Liberty, the word which in itself is the very charter of the United States and the basis of its Constitution. In the Revolutionary War the armed forces of our country were employed to win Liberty for the young nation, just as in the great war which ended two years and a half ago, it was this idea which stirred our people to give their aid in that contest against absolutism and military domination. To the American people war is abhorrent, and a war in which their army and navy would be employed for purposes of aggression is unthinkable; but once the principle of liberty is in danger for us or for the world we are ready to defend it with our whole strength as we sufficiently proved in France. It is then because we feel that our country in war and in peace is the champion of liberty that we celebrate this day with such solemnity.

FLAG'S MEANING

The second thought is that of our country. The flag which floats over us today is the symbol of our native land. It means America and all that that name implies for us and for the world: a country of light and liberty, of law and justice, a country of peace and prosperity which has a history which we all know and of which we all are proud. And inevitably we link with the thought of country the thought of service to our country. The men of our army and navy sum up for us that idea of service, men who though they are under orders and have learned to obey are not a military caste separate from the people, but fellow citizens in arms ready at all times to defend the honor and safety of the United States.

These are the great ideas which make Memorial Day a real and living observance. We keep it not as a formal tribute which we pay to those who have served their country, but because this observance recalls to us the ideals of liberty and service by which that country lives.

And the thought of service ought to have for us a wider application. Those whose graves we decorate today died far from their native land, yet they rest here as in some sense a part of that country and of its history in the past. But every American in China lives cut off from his country not only by the distance of the wide Pacific, but because he cannot share in the common life of the Republic. And yet we here in Asia have a service which we can render, a service which places considerable responsibility upon each one of us.

HOW TO SERVE

This part of the world seems destined to be the place where great questions have to be decided. Politically we can have little influence in such matters, we who cannot even vote, but there are ways in which we can serve the United States as no one else can, and that is by keeping our country's honor bright and clear.

The peoples of Asia form their opinion of America from the Americans they know, and it rests very largely with us who live in the Far East whether the idea which they form of the United States will be a just and true picture of what our country is. No mean act but has its effect in a far wider circle than people think, and no honest and just deed but helps our country by showing what she really is. I do not hesitate to say that the American community has it in its power to greatly help or greatly hinder our country, because few as we are, and largely because we are few, we are taken as the representatives of our country.

Such are some of the thoughts which Memorial Day brings to mind and to which we shall do well to pledge ourselves in the recollection of those whom we come to commemorate and while we are gathered under the flag of the United States as fellow Americans, citizens of our great and beloved country.

Art Association Formed At Ningpo

(China Press Correspondence)

Ningpo, May 30.—For the first time in Ningpo an association has been organised to cultivate better taste in art and to arouse enthusiasm for the study of Eastern and Western art.

Considering the vulgar tendencies of the so-called modern pictures now so common in Chinese homes and public buildings, such an association will bring great satisfaction to the real lovers of art. The promoters and members of this association in Ningpo belong to the most modern and intelligent class here and they hope to model the association after those in Europe and America.

Cattle Sales To Japanese Stop

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, May 29.—Coming of hot weather and the ripening of the crops in the famine areas have noticeably decreased the shipment of cattle to Japan. During the late fall and winter Japanese buyers with ready cash obtained excellent bargains in cattle and for several months as many as 10,000 head were shipped out of China every thirty days.

Most of these cattle were used as farm workers and their sale caused a pronounced falling off in the means of production. Now that green stuffs have grown up and the harvest is about to begin, the residents of famine areas are holding on their stock. In some areas as high as 90 percent of the cattle fell into the hands of Japanese buyers.

The latest reports show that in April only 2,800 head were shipped over the Tsinan-Tsingtau line as against the 10,000 a month previously.

The cattle that are gone cannot be purchased back by the Chinese except at exhorbitant prices and famine relief workers generally believe that a special fund should he established to aid farmers in obtaining a new supply of stock from other than Japanese sources.

Now on sale everywhere!

Messrs. Benger's Food Ltd. are able to announce that supplies of Benger's Food should now be readily obtainable throughout India and the Far East.

INJUNCTION SEEKS TO RESTORE OLD C.M.S.N. CO. HEADS

Litigation Follows Clash Among Shareholders At Annual Meeting

An injunction, which promises to result in sensational developments, was granted Monday against the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Co., Ltd., by Italian Assessor Ferrajolo and Magistrate Yui in the Mixed Court. The application was made by Chen Yung-ling, interpreter for Mr. G. D. Musso, representing, according to statements made by the administration, 132 shares. The company has issued 80,000 shares altogether.

The injunction was to restrain the defendant company from carrying out the resolutions passed and election held at the 47th annual meeting of the shareholders at the Chinese Chamber of Commerce on Saturday afternoon when a near riot took place and also to allow the old board of directors to function as usual.

It will be recalled that at the meeting on Saturday, two of the three departmental heads were not re-elected as a result of dissatisfaction freely expressed by the shareholders. They were Fu Siao-en, chief of the property department and Chen Fee-ting, of the financial department. The injunction sought to restore Fu and Chen to office.

The company is registered with the City Magistrate in accordance with the usage before the promulgation of the company laws. As such, the shareholders supporting the resolutions say, the Mixed Court has no jurisdiction.

Opium Smugglers Active At Ichang

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, May 26.—The Foo Tien Hotel kept by Japanese at Ichang, a treaty port on the upper Yangtze Valley and for many years past a recognised opium emporium in the interior of China, was at last discovered to be the largest opium smuggling agency in Ichang by the Japanese Consul there, who when calling on that hotel on May 20, saw large roomfuls of well-packed boxes containing the drug.

After seeing the boxes, the Japanese Consul sent a corps of Consulate guards to raid that hotel, and seized nearly one hundred Standard Oil filled cans of opium. But when the boxes were in transport, large crowds of street people hemmed in the guards from the Japanese Consulate, and robbed them of part of the opium. On the Chinese police being called in to help, the crowd dispersed with the spoils. Then Chinese policemen were sent to the Japanese hotel to clear that house of any opium it then had.

After consultation with the Japanese Consul, the Chinese police authorities got permission to burn the opium from the Japanese Consul who expressed his regret at seeing his own nationals engaged in the nefarious traffic. Accordingly the boxes of opium were burned before the public outside the city.

PRISONER TRIES SUICIDE

The Chinese tramway ticket inspector charged with splitting the proceeds of a $200 pocket-picking haul attempted to commit suicide in the charge room at Hongkew police station by stabbing himself in the throat with a small penknife Monday night and yesterday that charge was added to the previous one. A further charge of being an associate of thieves was also placed against him. The case was adjourned until Thursday.

Korean Leader Back From Interior

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, May 26.—A representative of the Korean Provisional Government, Mr. Lee Yi-yuan, has just returned to Hankow from Changsha, Hunan, where he has recently organised branches of the Chinese-Korean Co-operative Society in Changsha, Changteh and Siangtan.

Mixed Court Jottings

Charges of embezzlement were brought yesterday against a shroff of the Municipal revenue department. The defendant failed to report last Saturday and an examination of his books showed a shortage of Tls. 3,051. The case was remanded for one week.

An extensively fitted out opium den at 53 Chekiang Road was raided Monday night and yesterday three men charged as conductors of the place were sentenced, one to a month's and two to two weeks' imprisonment. Of nine patrons seized in the raid, five paid fines of $3 each and the rest forfeited bail of $20 each by non-appearance. Eight pipes, eight lamps and a large quantity of other paraphernalia and opium were confiscated.

Detective Sergeant Kilkenny yesterday prosecuted three men for bicycle thefts and receiving in the Central district. The thief, who confessed the stealing of 18 bicycles, only three of which have been identified by their owners, was sent to prison for a year and two shopkeepers who purchased the machines from him were sentenced to one month each.

Four more men charged as members of an organised band of armed robbers were remanded in custody yesterday for trial with the three previously arrested.

A number of coolies employed by the Waterworks company went on strike Sunday, demanding a nine-cent a day raise. Since then there have been instances of attempted intimidation of workers remaining and a coolie was fined $3 on such a charge yesterday.

A chauffeur employed by a Japanese motor owner was charged with reckless driving on Dixwell Road and knocking down a six-year-old child who is in hospital suffering from a fractured skull and not expected to live. The accused was remanded in custody.

After negotiating three purchases of opium from a chemist's shop at 356 Hupeh Road, Chief Detective Inspector Eek raided the place and seized 195 pieces of opium, many empty tins and 11 account books. A shop assistant was arrested and charged as the proprietor. C. D. I. Eek stated that the place formerly had been registered at the Italian Consulate but Mr. Krisel, appearing for the accused, said that no Italian interests were claimed and asked leniency for his client on the ground that he was not actually the proprietor. The court imposed a fine of $100, with the alternative of a month in prison. The opium was contained in packets bearing the label, "Sino-Italian Dispensary" and is valued at $2,000. It was ordered confiscated.

Soldier Slays Infant To Get Bed

(China Press Correspondence)

Suchien, Kiangsu, May 25.—Stories of violence are nothing new to residents of Suchien, but yesterday a soldier in the camp here perpetrated a crime which seems to deserve special mention. This military gentleman went to the home of a farmer named Liu and asked whether the family had a bed. He said he wished to borrow it for a few days, without specifying the exact time when he would return it. Of course the Lius knew what this meant, and refused to lend him the bed, on which lay a little baby three or four months old. The soldier insisted that he must have it. Possibly he was exhausted by his tremendous efforts to uphold the great cause of law and order, and needed a good rest; but some Chinese have expressed the opinion that he probably meant to sell the bed for 30 or 40 cents, or perhaps less. At any rate, he seized the coveted prize, unceremoniously dumping the baby and various other articles on the ground.

A little later, the family picked up the baby and found it dead. They followed the heroic soldier to the camp, where they proceeded to make as much disturbance as possible. The officer in charge sent some troops to the farmhouse, and ascertained that the baby really was dead. Today the matter was discussed, and various suggestions of punishment were offered. Finally the family of the deceased accepted twenty strings of cash by way of indemnity, and the head man of their village gave a written statement to the effect that the incident was closed.

The "Wayport Rooms" Committee of St. Joseph's Catholic Association gratefully acknowledge the receipt of a donation of $1,500 from the Stewards of the Race Club for the Sailors' Institute and Home in Boone Road. It is hoped that the Rooms will be opened by the end of June.

Hupeh Governor Aids University

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, May 24.—The Wuhan University now being promoted in Hankow by Ex-President Li Yuan-hung is reported to have received an endowment of $30,000 from General Wang Chuan-yuan, Military Governor of Hupeh, when the latter called on the former president during his stay at Tientsin.

General Wang also promised to extend further help to this new institution of high learning when he returned to Wuchang. He said he would bring pressure to bear on authorities having charge of German properties in Hankow to allow the new University to be housed in the former German-Chinese Academy of Hankow.

The preparation committee of this University has already made considerable headway in Hankow and Wuchang. The University expects to begin work in the year 1922, if suitable site and buildings can be secured within an early date.

Kamunting Rubber Co. Planning Reorganisation

A resolution drafted with the purpose of carrying out a reorganisation of the Kamunting Rubber Plantation Company was adopted yesterday at an extraordinary general meeting of the company. Another extraordinary meeting to confirm the action taken will be held on June 4 at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. E. W. Noel presided at the meeting and the directors present were Messrs. C. R. Burkill and G. M. W. Hummell. A representation of 9,011 shares was present.

The Chairman briefly referred to the circular letters that have been issued to shareholders before offering the resolution which was seconded by Mr. Burkill. His short address was as follows:

Gentlemen: The circular letters sent to shareholders regarding the proposed reconstruction of the Company fully explained the reasons for this reconstruction and I do not think there is any necessity for me to say anything further regarding it. It is proposed by myself and seconded by Mr. Burkill.

THE RESOLUTION

The resolution that was adopted is as follows:

"1. That it is desirable to reconstruct the company and accordingly that the company be wound up voluntarily and that John Vincent Champneys Davis be and he is hereby appointed liquidator for the purposes of such winding up."

"2. That the said liquidator be and he is hereby authorised to consent to the registration of a new company to be named 'The Shanghai Kedah Plantations, Limited' with a memorandum and articles of association which have already been prepared with the privity and approval of the directors of this company."

"3. That the draft agreement submitted to this meeting and expressed to be made between this company and its liquidator of the one part and the Shanghai Kedah Plantations, Limited of the other part be and the same is hereby approved and that the said liquidator be and he is hereby authorised pursuant to Section 185 of the Companies Ordinance of Hongkong 1911 to enter into an agreement with such new company (when incorporated) in the terms of the said draft and to carry the same into effect with such (if any) modifications as he thinks expedient."

American Woman's Club

The final meeting of the American Woman's Club Literary Department will take place next Friday afternoon at the Royal Asiatic Society Hall, when Mrs. J. H. Gray will lecture on "Wood Carvings" and Mrs. C. C. Gamble will give a talk on "Ivory Carvings." Artistic slides of famous bits of wood carving will be used as illustrations. Members and guests are asked to note that the meeting will take place at 4:00 p.m. instead of 4:30 as usual, in order to avoid conflict with the piano recital which advanced music pupils of the American School are to give at 5:00 p.m. in the Carlton Cafe.

EXHIBITION SATURDAY

The exhibition of Chinese paintings under the auspices of the American Woman's Club Literary Department, scheduled to take place next Saturday, has been postponed until June tenth. The pictures, which are the property of Mr. Evan Morgan and Mr. Charles Kliene, will be displayed on that date from 2:00 to 6:00 p.m. in the library of the Christian Literary Society, at the corner of Darroch and North Szechuen Roads. Members are privileged to invite guests to the exhibition.

AMERICAN SCHOOL RECITAL

The Music Department of the Shanghai American School will give their annual recital at the Carlton Cafe at 5 p.m. on Friday, June 3. The program is under the joint direction of Miss Lila K. La Mond and Miss Frances Adams. Miss La Mond has had charge of the Piano Department for four years. During these four years the department has grown until during the last year it has had over seventy pupils. Miss Adams has been with the school for six years and has drilled the children for the vocal part of the program.

All friends of the school and those interested in the work are invited to hear the children on Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Pootung Electric Co. Extends Its Service

The Pootung Electric Supply Company has finished installing its second plant, and since the supply of whole night current has been available the demand has been enormously increasing. Butterfield and Swire have stopped their own generating plants and now use the company's public supply for their Pootung and Watung Wharves.

Owing to numerous applications from Butterfield and Swire, Mackenzie and Co., Ming Chen Iron Works, etc., for supply of day time current for motors, Mr. S. H. Dong, has, by a resolution of the Directors, placed an order for considerable quantities of transformers, watthour meters and motors, which are to be supplied on hire at a fixed monthly rental to those who desire to replace their existing driving engines with motors. Other necessary arrangements are well in progress, and it is expected that electric power will be available two or three months after.

'Blue Bird' Tonight

A dramatic event of unusual interest will take place at the Lyceum Theater tonight, where the pupils of McTyeire School are to give their initial performance of Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird." Though the date of the play was set only a few weeks ago, rehearsals have been in progress since last fall. All the costumes have been made by the student body and many of the scenic effects were designed by them with the aid of Miss Clara Park, who is directing the performance.

Though Chinese girl students are renowned for ambitious attempts in the dramatic line, the announcement of their intention to produce "The Blue Bird" was a bit staggering to many of their admirers. It will be interesting to see just how young women of the Orient will interpret the Belgian mystic. One may be sure, however, that the production will show painstaking care in its details and that the young actresses will play their parts with a superb lack of self-consciousness.

The money raised by the performance will be added to the fund which the senior class has pledged itself to raise for the school's Forward Movement. "The Blue Bird" will be repeated on Thursday and Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoon.

Shirley President Braces

When one contemplates erecting the tallest building in the world or a pair of braces one must have a definite plan; that the plan may be good or bad, time will tell.

But if one builds with the point of view of having the welfare of the users at heart, the plan is almost sure of success.

The President Suspender Company started fifty years ago to build braces to give the wearer the most comfort and the best value. At all times they built for quality.

Fifty years of continuous ever-increasing satisfied wearers the world over is a testimonial that their plan of building was correct.

On Making Sure

There is nothing like making sure where one's health is concerned. Good health is the best guarantee that Life shall be a success. Now it is well-known that digestive disorders are the cause of more cases of ill-health than any other class of ailment. The digestive system is so extensive, so complex and so hard-worked, that its liability to derangement is not astonishing. Happily, however, many digestive ailments can be easily remedied. Happily, too, many digestions need never go wrong. You can make reasonably sure that your digestion will not fail you, even under trying conditions, if you get into the excellent way of taking Beecham's Pills. This "Wonderful Medicine"—as it has been called—does really work wonders with the digestive system. Beecham's Pills impart tone to the stomach, regulate the action of the liver and kidneys and gently stimulate the bowels into healthy activity. Get into the habit of making sure. Have recourse to Beecham's Pills at the first sign of digestive trouble. Make sure of your health by taking

Describes Density As Key To Size Of The Universe

Prof. Einstein Says If It Does Not Approach Zero Then The Universe Is Finite

New York, April 20.—Professor Albert Einstein touched on the question of a finite universe in his lecture yesterday at the College of the City of New York. He did not say that the universe was finite, for astrophysical experiments had not yet been able to determine the data by which such a statement might be proved, but, as explained some months ago in The New York Times, he said that if it were found that the average density of matter in the universe did not approach zero, then the conclusion could be drawn that the universe was finite.

His lecture was heard by the largest group of scientists and students who have yet attended his lectures. Among the former were several members of the Columbia physics and mathmatical Faculty, including Professor Kasher, Professor G. B. Pegram, Professor A. P. Wills, Professor G. Y. Wendell, Professor H. W. Webb and President Mezes of the City College, with many members of his staff. They listened to Professor Einstein's exposition of general relativity as distinguished from special relativity to which he had hitherto confined his remarks, and were particularly interested in his passing reference to the limitation of the universe, which came at the end of his talk.

EUCLIDEAN SPACE INFINITE

Euclidean space was infinite, he said, but an infinite universe was only possible if the average density of matter in the universe approached zero as it was extended. If there were stars everywhere, if the density of matter did not decrease so that the average density did not approach zero then the conclusion must be that the world was finite.

In special relativity it was found that there was no unique co-ordinate system with reference to which natural law had to be described, Professor Einstein said, but that it was merely necessary that the co-ordinate system be an inertial system. Galilean law was that in an inertial system a material point far from other matter moved uniformly in a straight line. But viewed from an accelerated system the point would describe a parabole. So that Galilean law did not hold for an accelerated system, hence it must be abandoned in developing the theory of generalised relativity.

There was, however, another general law, that of the equal acceleration of all bodies in the gravitational field which led to the equality of the gravitational mass of a body (as measured by gravitational attraction) an the inertial mass (as measured by the acceleration caused in it by a given force). The agreement of these two quantities was most important and the weakness of classical mechanics lay in its failure to give the proper significance to this fact.

MODIFIES CONCEPTION OF ME

Reverting to the accelerated co-ordinate system, it was seen that all bodies in it had the same acceleration, and the behavior of free bodies in such a system was identical to their behavior in a gravitational field.

"Now," said Professor Einstein, "we are in a position to modify our conception of mechanics so as to apply to any co-ordinate system, for we can investigate an accelerated system by simply using a suitable gravitational field in connection with it and forgetting the acceleration."

The inertial mass of a body, which was in an inertial system, manifested itself as the gravitational weight of the body when observed from an accelerated system. This equivalence of gravitational and inertial mass led Einstein to consider the possibility of developing a generalised relativity theory. By changing the conditions of observation it was possible to create a gravitational field, and by investigating the gravitational field created being led to gravitational law. The task of generalised relativity was to replace a gravitational field by the suitable co-ordinate system, find the natural laws, and compare them with actual experimental law.

Professor Einstein took the blackboard as a co-ordinate system, and asked his audience to imagine a second co-ordinate system rotating about an axis perpendicular to the blackboard.

EUCLIDEAN GEOMETRY

"Does Euclidean geometry and measurement of time as in special relativity hold here?" he asked. "Look at the situation either from the blackboard or the rotating system. Take measureing rods which are equal when at rest and lay them along the radius of the disc in the rotating system from the centre to the circumference, and around the circumference. According to special relativity the rods on the circumference become shorter while the rods along the diameter, having no motion in the direction of their length, do not shorten. When the disc is stationary the relative number of rods on the circumference and diameter is pi, about 3.14, the radio given by Euclidean geometry. But when the disc rotates more rods will fit around the circumference, and the relative number is no longer pi. Hence Euclidean geometry is not valid here. In view of the equivalence of the gravitational field and the accelerated system Euclidean geometry must be rejected for the gravitational field also.

"Likewise with time. A clock on the periphery moves slower than a clock at the center for an observer on the blackboard. It must go more slowly, as has been shown, for the observer on the disc, hence the conclusion that as soon as a gravitational field is at hand, of which this is a special case, then clocks at different places run at different speeds.

HOW TO DEAL WITH SPACE

"On such a disc and therefore in a gravitational field we cannot build up a cubical system with rods, for this is Euclidean. This means that we cannot use Cartesian co-ordinates which depend on Euclidean geometry. How then can space and time be dealt with? Mathematic has long known the necessary theory, the geometry of a curved surface invest gated by Gauss, that is, the behavior of little sticks arranged on such a surface, yields the method when the geometry is generalised to four dimensions. While Euclidean geometry fails on such a surface it can be applied locally to a sufficiently small portion of the surface."

As elaborated by Riemann and Neumann this geometry is used by Einstein to describe physical space and time.

WEAPON IN SILK TRADE

Mayor Of Tokio Says Boycott Would Defeat Japan

Tokio, April 30.—Baron Goto, present Mayor of Tokio and regarded as the possible next Premier, asserts that Japan fundamentally and absolutely has no aggressive designs and that Japan is purely fortifying for self-defense. He asserts that some militarists wish to extend the scope of armaments, but only for self-interests. He says that Japan is not able to compete with America in armaments and besides America's greatest weapon is an economic boycott, especially the silk trade.

"We Japanese cannot deny that some entertain a vague fear of a threat in the American possession of the Philippines," he said. "This fear is not so much the creation of the Japanese as it is of the Americans. When we go to the Philippines we are subjected to considerable restraint, so we have come to the conclusion that America is not so free as we expected. Such is the view of the small minority, but the majority never give the Philippines a thought. If restrictions for free residence in the Philippines were removed Japan would be perfectly reconciled. Any degree of enmity would be wiped out and far from having any hostile intentions in the Philippines the Japanese would live there abiding by the laws as peacefully as in Hawaii.

"You will be able to discern the truth of my statement when you consider carefully whether it is possible for Japan to compete in armaments. The resources of Japan cannot be hidden. I cannot understand why Americans are worried over the possibility of a war with Japan. Here is a statement which is probably unique and which probably has not been heard elsewhere. You do not need warships. Just cut off the silk trade and see what Japan can do. It appears to me utterly absurd not to consider the point of the silk trade.

"Of course Japan is greatly worried by its annual increase of 600,000 in population. If it could send the surplus to the Philippines and South America I believe many worries would be relieved. Some of your statesmen speak of the danger of the migration of so many, but recall the peace in Hawaii as an example."

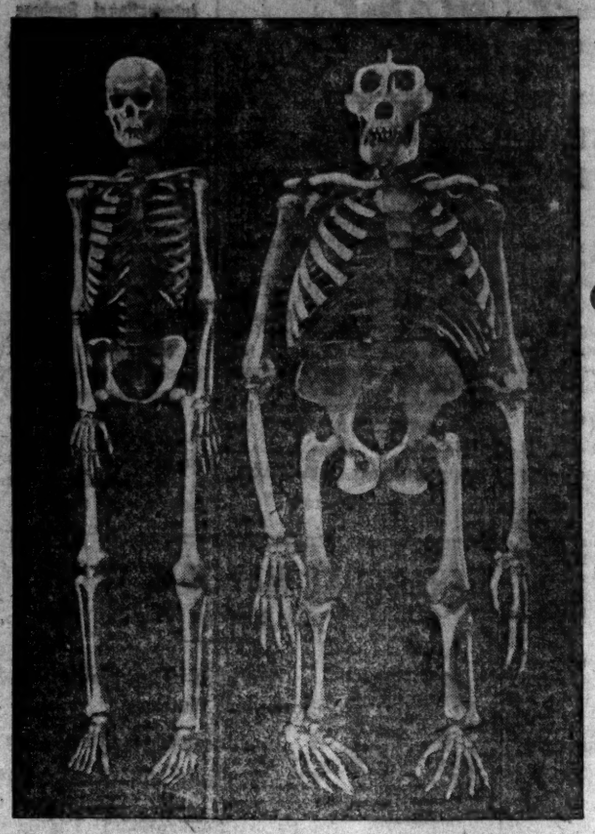
The Most Interesting Individual in the Big Circus

Why John Daniel, the Gentlemanly Gorilla, Is Treated Better Than Any of the Rest of the 1500 Members of the Ringling Brothers' Show at Madison Square Garden



Powerful Skeleton of a Gorilla and the Comparatively Puny Frame of a Man.

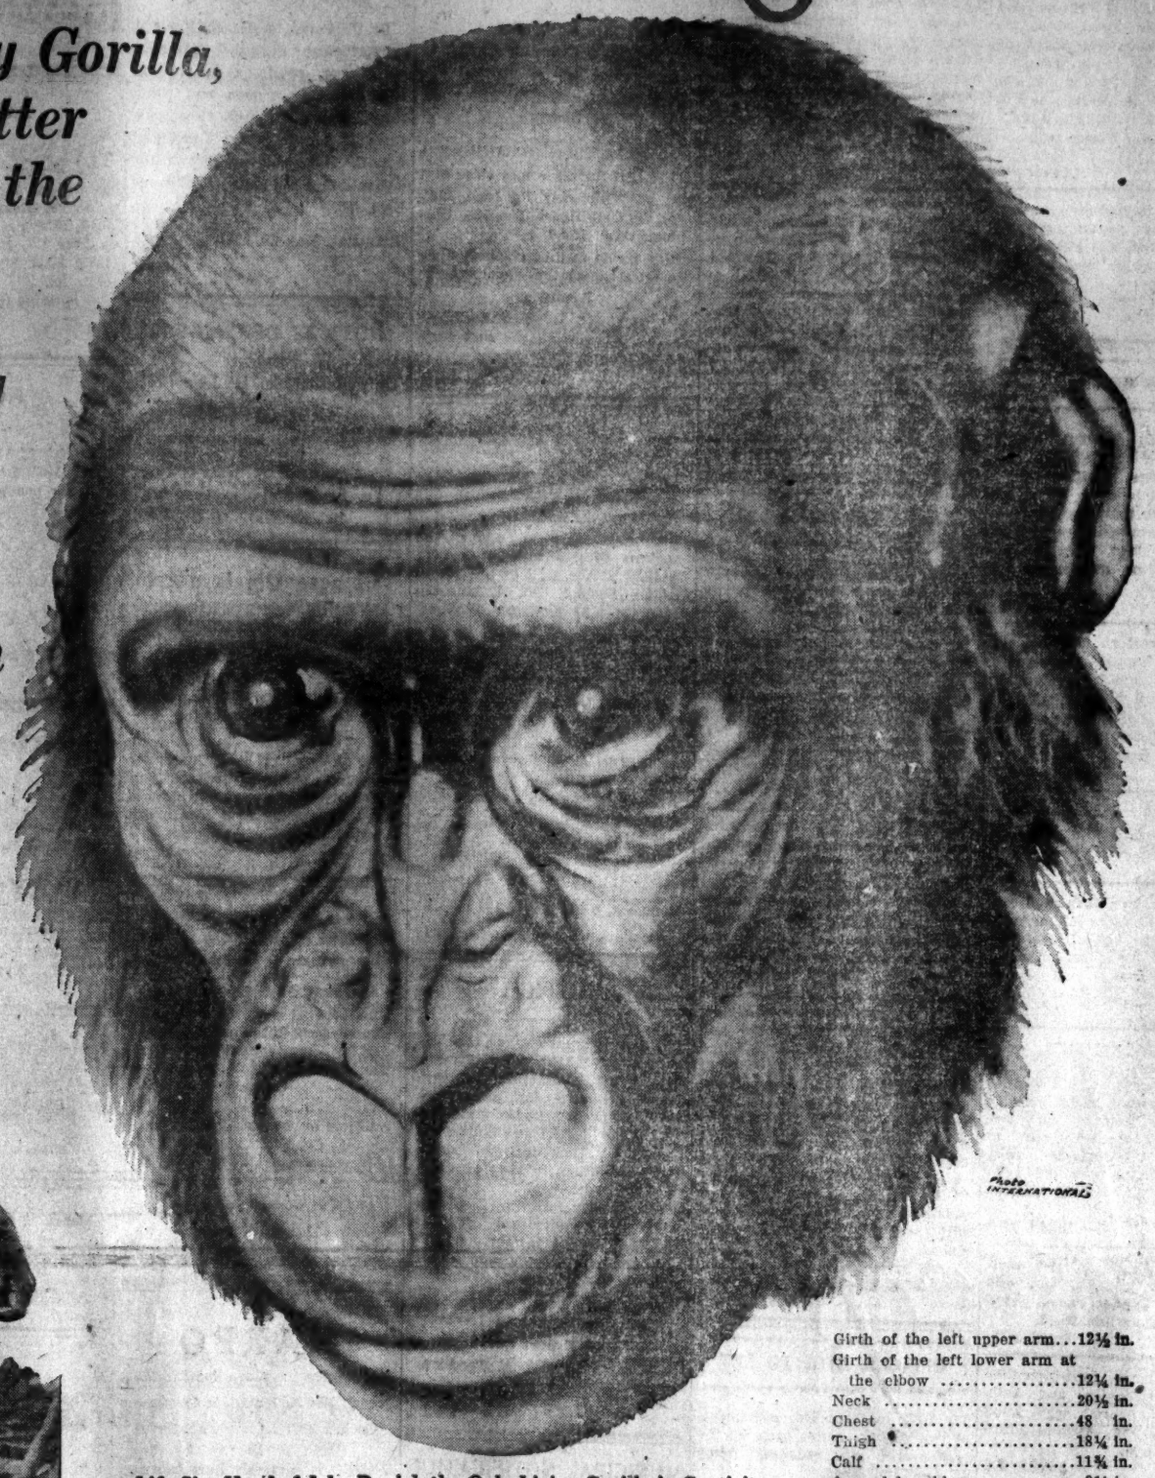


Photo INTERNATIONAL

Life-Size Head of John Daniel, the Only Living Gorilla in Captivity.

Photograph Below of the Circus Gorilla's Giant Father After He was Shot in the African Jungle.

WHAT makes John Daniel so very important? From some points of view he looks a little, not particularly respectable old man, and then, again, you might think he was scarcely human.

Really, there are strong reasons for treating him as an extremely important individual. Although he is comparatively small, he can pull three strong men on a rope, and although he looks a bit disreputable and low-browed, he is said to be worth $150,000.

John Daniel is the most petted and pampered individual among the 1,500 men, women and animals employed in the big circus in Madison Square Garden.

John Daniel never does anything he doesn't want to do; is never fined or punished; eats and drinks what he pleases—without regard to prohibition; gets up when he likes and behaves just about as he jolly well pleases all the time.

John Daniel is a young gorilla—the only gorilla now in captivity and the only gorilla as big and old who has ever been in captivity. He is beyond question the most human of all the monkey family. If you have any doubt about this take a good look at him and then examine his two distant cousins of the chimpanzee family, who are kept in a neighboring cage.

Chimpanzees have been regarded as very nearly human, but when you look at John Daniel's big brown eye, his high brow and his well modelled hands you know that he is pretty nearly your own kind.

John is only four and a half years old.

John Daniel sleeps in a bed, sits down at a table and eats his meals in a cleanly manner, washes up his own plates and dishes and acts generally just like a young human being. Perhaps the most remarkable fact about him is that he has learned to do all these things without any compulsion, such as is used with ordinary animals to teach them tricks. Most of his habits he has learned by imitation and others because his guardians have pointed out to him in a friendly way that it was the best thing to do.

John Daniel has to have at least three good drinks of whiskey a day and sometimes a glass of sherry or port. The drinks have been found necessary to keep him alive and in health, for it has only been possible to preserve him by a carefully studied and rather novel system of diet.

The drinks not only keep his digestion in good order—their effect is profoundly psychological. They prevent him from falling into a state of melancholia, which would soon end in death, the kind of "death" that has overtaken every young gorilla who has ever been in captivity.

When John Daniel is left many hours without an alcoholic stimulant, it has been noticed that he falls into a state of deep melancholy and dejection. He appears to be thinking of the African forests and mountains from which he was torn in his infancy and contrasting them unfavorably with his present noisy and confining surroundings.

At such times he crouches down motionless like an utterly hopeless man. He will not lift his head or smile. He will not touch a morsel of food. Finally his keeper, John C. Benson, is forced to mix up a good stiff drink and coax him to take it.

"John Daniel," says Mr. Benson in a pleading voice. "Won't you please take a little drink. Do it to please me."

At first John Daniel pretends not even to care for a drink, but his eye gradually brightens up a bit and moves towards the cheering cup. Finally he stretches out a rather nervous hand, seizes the cup and drains it with great satisfaction.

When his health is fair, his drink is usually whiskey and soda, but as soon as he shows any sign of being run down he receives a glass of sherry or port with a couple or raw eggs beaten up in it. A doctor's prescription is obtained to enable him to have all the stimulant that is good for him.

"John Daniel knows perfectly well that a sad and melancholy air usually brings him a drink," said Mr. Benson. "Sometimes he tries to take advantage of this to get a drink when he doesn't really need it. An hour or so after he has had a good one, he will pretend to fall into a fit of deep melancholy in order to get another.

"When he does this I look at his eye closely and I can always tell whether he is feeling really bad or just pretending. He knows he has a tell-tale eye and he sometimes turns his head away to hide it. But if he were really sick he wouldn't have energy enough to turn his head. I know all his tricks now and can read him like a book.

"I have to be very careful not to give him too much to drink, for that would be as bad as not giving him enough."

John Daniel eats a remarkably varied diet. It will be a surprise to many people, who think that apes are vegetarians, to know that he eats half a pound of meat a day and cannot live without it. For breakfast he takes a couple of pints of milk, an orange, three or four peanuts and a half dozen raisins.

At noon he eats his steak. From time to time, whenever the mood seizes him, he will chew on a smoked kippered herring or some other delicacy. Before going to bed he takes a little more milk and fruit and then he rolls himself in a blanket and gets into his little bedstead like a human boy.

John Daniel has a strong disposition to steal things, and some cynics will say that this shows his human relationship. His keeper takes advantage of this to make him take nourishment when he doesn't want it—just as an anxious mother might do with a peevish child.

It is necessary to give John Daniel cod liver oil, but he won't take it when it is offered him plain. It is difficult to trick him, for his power of smell is marvelous. But he does love ice cream. So his keeper mixes a bowl of ice cream and cod liver oil, which he places in his cage. Then he says sternly:

"John Daniel, don't you dare touch that ice cream."

John Daniel eyes the keeper artfully, waits until he is out of the room, and then eats the ice cream with unusual haste and relish, not worrying about the cod liver oil.

His resemblance to a human child is indeed extraordinary. He is always wanting to play tricks and do mischievous things. And having learned that he will not be punished for anything, he takes full advantage of the fact.

After only one day's experience he could detect a flashlight photographer as soon as he saw him. When one of this fraternity approached him John Daniel would crouch down in a corner of his cage and pull a bag over himself.

John Daniel understands a great variety of sentences and his comprehension appears to be about that of a three-year-old child. He understands clearly such complicated phrases as "Pick up that piece of paper" and "Don't be rough."

Everyone who has enjoyed a good opportunity to meet John Daniel has been struck by his extremely good manners. He seems to be inherently a gentleman. Of all the apes in the circus he is the only one who does not snatch or grab his food. If you have half a dozen oranges or bananas any other monkey will grab greedily at the whole outfit, whereas John will wait respectfully until you hand them to him one at a time.

John Daniel is very fond of pretty girls and, in fact, he prefers the society of any woman to a man. When a crowd of men passes in front of his cage he looks at them with a bored, uninterested expression, but as soon as a girl comes along he brightens up and reaches out his hand to her.

No young woman has ever resented an advance by John Daniel. When he meets an amiable woman he will sit for hours with her hand in his, perfectly happy and contented. He likes hats trimmed with red and waists of light material cut low at the neck.

The only time a woman displeases him is when she wears certain kinds of fur. He becomes furious with any woman who wears red fox fur, and he can tell if it is red fox dyed black. This is apparently associated either with his ancestral history or with his previous personal experience.

His fondness for women is evidently accounted for in part by the romance of his early life, although it is also possibly a natural inclination. He was originally captured in the Kameroon country in German Africa by an exploration party working for the Hagenbeck firm. When they were returning to Europe they found the war was on and his German captors were interned by the British.

John Daniel was transferred to a British animal dealer, who took him to London and sold him to an English society woman of prominence. She kept him in her mansion at No. 14 Sloane street, in the West End of London, and treated him like a beloved child.

He had a room of his own, and whenever he was sick his fond mistress sat up with him all night.

She took him to tea at the Hotel Savoy and The Ritz nearly every afternoon. He was the principal attraction at many aristocratic garden parties during several London seasons. It may not be a fact that he was an honored guest at a garden party given by the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace, but there is no doubt that he was the central figure at many entertainments only a little less important.

After nearly four years of happy family life his mistress was heart-broken to find that it was no longer possible to keep him. He was growing so powerful that even without meaning the least harm he was too likely to pull her to pieces in a playful mood. He had given an example of his power by crippling several London policemen and dignified butlers he didn't like. It was probable that if he ran wild a hundred policemen would not be able to arrest him. His mistress came to the conclusion that the authorities would soon compel her to bid her little one a sad farewell.

She sold him to the American circus owners for $20,000, with the distinct understanding that he should never be taught tricks in the way they are taught to ordinary performing animals. It is, therefore, certain that John Daniel will live in luxury for the rest of his life; that he will never be punished, beaten, nor forced to do anything he does not want to do—except when force may be necessary to save his life.

John Daniel now stands 4 feet 4 inches—or would if he stood upright, which he never does. He weighs 184 pounds when in good condition. Here are some of his principal measurements:

Girth of the left upper arm	12½ in.
Girth of the left lower arm at the elbow	12¼ in.
Neck	20½ in.
Chest	48 in.
Thigh	18¼ in.
Calf	11¾ in.
Around knuckles	9½ in.
Spread across the arms	5 ft. 6 in.

His strength is enormous and altogether out of proportion to his size and height.

This baby gorilla was able to outpull on a rope three of the strongest men in the circus—Abdullah Tahar, the terrible Turk; Giuseppe Pichianiri, the Italian acrobat, who can lift half a dozen men, and Matsada Tokarichi, the Japanese wrestler.

After this contest Giuseppe said to Matsada:

"I will bet you $100 to $10 that Strangler Lewis, the best wrestler in America, cannot put John Daniel on his back—provided Lewis is willing to try."

But the canny Jap would not take the bet.

During the voyage from London on the ship Old North State John Daniel, who was in a very good humor, was allowed at liberty on deck. Using only one hand he would easily pull around three sailors on the other end of a rope.

It is an interesting fact that this baby ape, standing on a level floor with nothing to brace his feet, can pull three strong men weighing nearly three times as much as himself. The reasons are partly to be found in his enormous neck and back muscles. His neck and back have an outward curve and are not curved in and out like a human back and neck. His enormous feet, which are shaped like human hands, take hold even of a flat floor and, in combination with his back and neck muscles, give him a wonderful anchorage.

There is little doubt that John Daniel, in a bad temper, would pull a man to pieces. If he lives he will reach his full growth at twenty-one years—another indication of his human relationship. He will then, probably, stand about five feet six inches and weigh about 600 pounds. It is just as well to remember, however, that no gorilla has ever grown up in captivity.

John Daniel's father was killed at the time he was captured. It was in the farthest interior of the Kameroon country, in West Africa, hundreds of miles from the coast. The country there is mountainous, and John Daniel's family were apparently meant by nature for a cold climate, because they are covered with long, thick hair.

John Daniel's father measured 24¾ inches around the neck, 16¾ inches around the biceps and weighed 600 pounds. The natives looked on him as a man of demoniac temper and of very different race from themselves and celebrated his death with wild rejoicings. Some, indeed, thought he was Satan himself.

Spot and forward bar silver were again each up 1/8d. in London yesterday.

No advices have been received from New York, it being a holiday there yesterday but the London-New York cross rate as given from London is down to 386. The change in the official quotations today were a drop in the Gold Dollar rate to 61, the Yen rate to 75½ and the Rupee rate to 245.

The market again was steady throughout the day and business was done at about the same rates as yesterday with the exception of the Gold Dollar rate which was 1/4 point lower due to the drop in the cross rate. The market closed steady with sellers of Sterling at 3/4 and of Gold Dollars at 65.

India again bought a small amount of silver in London yesterday and the silver market there is reported to be steady and quiet.

Kahn Gives Allies Our View On Debts

IN a letter to The London Times, Otto H. Kahn, the famous American banker, sets forth what he regards as the opinion of "the Man in the Street" in America toward post-war world conditions and pending issues between America and the Allies, with particular reference to the allied debt to America.

The Allies, he says, have obtained all the material spoils of the war while America, fighting only for an ideal, lost even that. Mr. Kahn's letter in part, follows:

Deal Sir: I look upon the relationship between England and America as far surpassing in importance and in effect for good o evil every other international element. Indeed, I cannot conceive of a world really at peace, riding safely the waves of the problems and complexities present and to come, and progressing toward a better state, unless it is bottomed on good will, genuine understanding and broad cooperation between the two great branches of the English-speaking family. With many millions of Americans, I am eager that everything be done to accomplish and nothing be done to endanger the full realisation of that consummation. It is in that spirit and from that sentiment that I have ventured upon the rather ungrateful function of submitting this letter.

I hope I may assume that my voice will be recognised as that of a sincere friend and well-wisher. It is the privilege of friendship to speak plainly. It is the duty of friendship to make itself the sometimes unwelcome messenger of truth, if the message is one of service.

I venture to hope that it may be in the ature of service, however modest and however imperfectly rendered, if I endeavor to place before your readers what is, according to my observation, the viewpoint and the reasoning of the "man in the street" in America, concerning a question which has all the elements of reciprocal ugly misinterpretation. I refer to the question, recently become one of acute discussion on this side of the water, of the treatment of the debts which the allied nations owe to America.

I shall refrain from expressing any opinion of my own on this subject. I mean to confine myself to being the dictograph of the "man in the street," as I hear his voice.

Whatever may be the shortcomings of the American people, no one can justly accuse them, individually or nationally, of lack of willing generosity. Why, then, the distinct manifestation of public sentiment, of late, against the suggestion of relinquishing war indebtedness all around among those with whom we stood as brothers in arms barely more than two years ago, in defense of a cause for which we were prepared to make sacrifices literally without limit?

It is literally true to say that she fought mainly for an ideal and against iniquity and it is doubtful whether she could have put forward the full fighting strength of a united nation if her people, overwhelmingly at last, had not come to hold that belief as to the meaning and aims of the conflict.

The spoils, and the only spoils—which America asked for and promised herself, was to uproot the poison growth of Prussianism, to make an end of war, as far as humanly possible, and to bring about a finer, worthier and nobler state of the world.

Has that expectation been realised? Has the world been made a better place to live in? Are national covetousness, racial animosities, narrow-souled and tortuous diplomacy; are jealousy, pettiness, strife, force, less in evidence now than they were before the war? Has the lion shown the slightest inclination to lie down with the lamb Has anything been done, except disingenuous and cumbersome contrivance of the League of Nations, to establish an era of lasting peace and a rule of international fairness and justice Is the Peace Treaty of Versailles a worthy sequel to the noble epic of the war?

To ask these questions is to answer them.

Sentimentally the attitude of "the man in the street" toward Europe has gradually become one of disillusionment and retrospective questioning.

Practically, he does not consider it a justified contention, under the cricumstances of the case, that the loans of America the Allies should eo ipso be considered and treated as a contribution to the common expense of the war. He has not forgotten the appalling sacrifices of the Allies in killed and wounded, nor the dreadful destruction wrought in the invaded regions, but he does not see the logic of having part of the penalty assessed against his country. Furthermore, from the matter of fact aspect, it seems to him an essential point of differentiation that each one of the Allied nations took material compensation from the vanquished to the extent that there were assets to distribute, territorial, physical or financial (not to mention the obtainment of advantages of a less tangible but none the less very real nature), while America, on the other hand, asked nothing and received nothing of the material spoils of war except a few ships, and, indeed, in certain respects the status resulting from the post-bellum settlement may be said to be rather unsubservient to her interests than otherwise.

Nor does "the man in the street" find convincing force in the argument which points to the vast profits that America drew from Europe during the period of her neutrality, because against that argument he places the fact that America gave back these profits, and a good deal more, in the cost, direct and indirect, of her participation in the war.

When "the man in the street" looks over the balance sheet of our participation in the war, what does he find?

He is far from undervaluing its asset side. True, these credit entries are of a nature mainly sentimental, but I doubt whether sentimental items have a greater popular value anywhere than in this so-called "land of the almighty dollar." I need not enumerate these assets. They have been set forth in hundreds of speeches and writings on both sides of the water.

What about the debit side? He seems to discern a tendency to discriminate against his country in respect of those world opportunities which its people played no mean part in helping to win for their comrades in arms. He does not relish the spirit and wording of the "mandates," nor the controversy over the disposition of the formerly German-owned cables, nor the dispute about the island of Yap, &c. He finds that the only country to which he is apt, even though mistakenly, to attribute aggressive designs, i.e., Japan, has been brought a good many miles nearer to his shores through the appropriation of strategically important islands in the Pacific, which lie athwart America's path to the Philippines and elsewhere. He finds that nothing positive or substantial has been done about the much-vaunted pledge to reduce armaments, and consequently, having learned from recent experiences to be somewhat skeptical in respect of international ethics, rather contrary to his natural disposition, he feels compelled to carry an irksomely heavy burden of armaments himself.

He finds a peace treaty which not only is far from his idealistic aspirations but which, two and a half years after the close of the great war, is still the subject of bickering and dickering and the cause of unceasing turmoil. He finds barriers and impediments and wilful interruptions thrown across the ways of trade and intercourse, in places where the stream of commerce was wont to flow evenly and smoothly. He finds wars and preparations for war, including a state of armed conflict, conducted with reciprocal ferocity, between England and part of Ireland.

He sees little reason to attach credence to the contention that these things would have been materially different if America had entered the League of Nations. Moreover, the great majority of the American people look upon the League, in its present shape and conception, as lacking both in sincerity and effectiveness and as demanding from America an uncalled-for reversal of her traditional policies and an intolerable curtailment of her right to "self-determination."

To sum up my analysis of the state of average American opinion at this time in the matter of the Allied indebtedness to this country: "The man in the street" is not lacking in generosity. He is fully conscious of the heroism

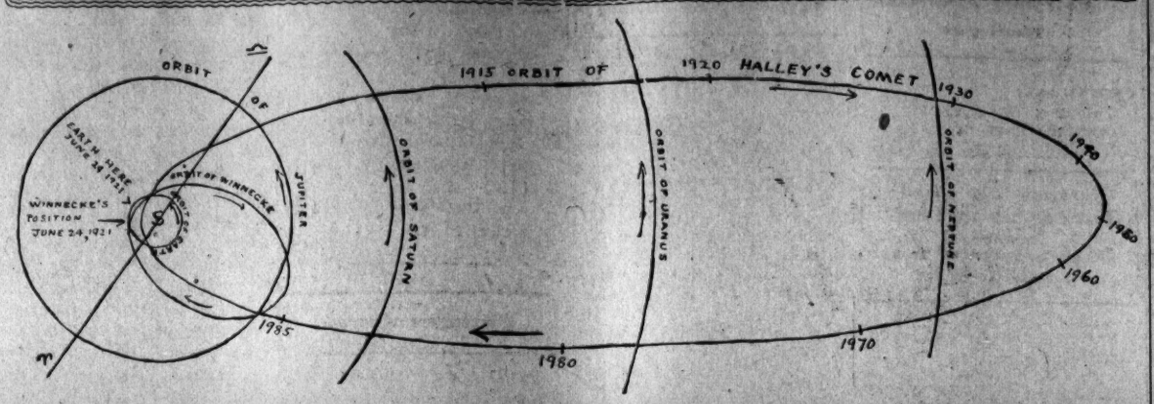
Comet Heading For Us At 24 Miles A Second By Prof. Henry Huizinga



The orbits of Halley's Comet, of Winnecke's Comet, and of some of the principal planets of our solar system, drawn to scale. Winnecke has been predicted to cross the earth's orbit on June 24 at a speed of 24 miles per second, the earth will probably be near the crossing, and coming from the opposite direction, at the rate of 18 1-2 miles per second. There need be no fear of a collision, for the comet is much thinner than air, thinner even than a vacuum. The sun is at "S", approximately at the center of the earth's orbit. On the same scale as the above chart the nearest star would be one and a quarter miles away.

Watch out! A Comet is coming! On the 24th of June, Winnecke's Comet is calculated to return from its long journey beyond Jupiter's orbit, and cross the path of our earth; but whether we shall be just there to meet it is somewhat doubtful. However, when Winnecke comes nearest to the sun in June or July we are bound to be somewhere in the neighborhood.

This is one of Jupiter's family of comets, which travel in long elliptical orbits, having their farthest point somewhere near Jupiter's path and their nearest point to the sun within the earth's orbit. Jupiter makes a longer journey of over three billion miles in almost a circle in a period of twelve years, but his "family" of "captured" comets make their trips back and forth in periods varying from three to eight years. Winnecke makes his journey of one and a half billion miles in a period of five years and 10 1-2 months, at an average speed of nearly eight miles a second; but comets like planets move much faster when they come near the sun.

What would happen if both bodies crossed each other's paths at the same time and collided, our earth travelling at the rate of 18 1-2 miles per second and the comet striking it headlong at the rate of 24 miles a second? Here let me tell you a little story. An old lady on board an ocean liner not far from the regions where the icebergs roam, approached the captain in a panicky way and said: "What would happen if our ship should strike a huge iceberg?" The captain answered with a drawl: "Why, the iceberg would move along as though nothing had happened!" "Oh, I feel so relieved," said the lady, "but are you sure?" Now this story is not apropos, unless you understand the earth to be the iceberg. For not only is the earth larger than Winnecke, but also the comet is so thin and airy that a collision between the two would be very much like a collision between the Rock of Gibraltar and a zephyr. Some one has said that a comet several thousand miles in diameter does not contain more material than would go into a good sized suit case: which is probably an understatement.

While then the collision theory has been pretty well robbed of its fearfulness in modern times, the near approach of a comet is always made use of to scare people unduly. Cranks advertise that the comet marks the end of the world and shout for sinners to "prepare and repent!" Also a new cause of terror has arisen recently, for it has been confidently assumed that the comet may contain poisonous gases, which will cause the death of all living creatures upon earth by asphyxiation. This fear is, however, equally groundless; for not only is it a mere supposition that there should be poisonous gases, but even if there were such, yet they would be so extremely rarified that they could not possibly have any effect.

COMETS FINE SPECTACLES

Having set our minds at rest as to any harmful consequences from the comet visiting us this month, what are the actual prospects of a glorious spectacle in store for us? In this matter we are likely to be disappointed. Winnecke is a small comet, and does not have a tail, and except when it is near the earth and in a favorable position it cannot be seen at all with the unaided eye. However, during former visits people have witnessed brilliant displays of meteors accompanying this comet, where otherwise its tail would be. It may pay us well to keep our eyes open for celestial pyrotechnics this month.

OTHER COMETS

Comets have been in all ages the most awe-inspiring and dreadful objects in the heavens. Unlike eclipses, which come with a certain degree of regularity, and concern just our sun and moon, the weird comet with its long hairy tail comes from nobody knows where, and goes nobody knows whither. Only a small number of comets move in short periods around the sun, but the great majority of them seem to move in parabolic or hyperbolic curves, coming from distant stars and visiting our sun only once and then moving on to remote regions among other stars. They are therefore called interstellar messengers; and remembering the great distances between our sun and the stars, and considering the comparative slowness of these messengers, millions of years must be occupied in the journey while the "visit"—literally, a flying one—lasts only a few days.

EVIL OMENS

The motions of comets were indeed different from anything that men were acquainted with, and their appearance was so strange that even the great astronomer, Kepler, regarded, them as living creatures, travelling through space with will and purpose, like fishes in the sea. They were looked upon as harbingers of evil, especially to kings and to whole nations. A comet synchronised with the death of great Ceasar in 44 B. C. In 1456 A. D., when Christianity was struggling with the Turks, the great comet, since known as Halley's comet, appeared and caused consternation all over Europe. The Pope caused special meetings to be called in all churches, and ordered prayers to be said daily to supplicate the protection of heaven against the impending calamity of "the devil, the Turk, and the comet." Even as late as 1910, the return of Halley's comet was thought to betoken the downfall of the Manchu Dynasty; and did it not bring on the World War?

MODERN SCIENCE ON COMETS

After the discovery of the laws of gravitation and the invention of the telescope and the spectroscope we can explain so much of the nature and movements of comets that the scientific world is no longer apprehensive, but always looks with eagerness for the approach of a comet. For not only do we enjoy the beautiful sight of the star with a tail, fan shaped and brilliant, and other meteoric displays that sometimes accompany it; but notwithstanding our more exact knowledge there is still a great deal of mystery about the make-up and motions of a comet, so that scientists are anxious to learn all they can about them.

In the first place, the paths of comets are not yet certainly determined. In ancient times comets were supposed to move wholly within the earth's atmosphere, until Tycho Brahe, celebrated Danish astronomer of the 16th century, and teacher of Kepler, proved that comets were much farther away. Since Newton's time comets were believed to move in parabolic orbits, coming from far distant stars, and after a brief visit to our sun travelling on again to other stars, never to return. This view is also now seriously questioned. While there are very few comets whose periods are known to be short, returning to us in less than 100 years, and never receding far beyond the orbit of Neptune: and while the periods of some have been calculated to be thousands of years, and the return of others cannot be predicted at all; yet there is a growing belief that most, if not all, comets that we ever see really belong to the solar system, though moving far away from us at their aphelion periods. When near the sun, the only time that a comet is visible, it is impossible to tell the difference between a very much elongated ellipse and a parabola. A comet moving in an elliptical orbit will return, but in a parabolic orbit it cannot return.

Then also, we are still far from understanding the constitution of comets. Some comets are very large, having a head a million miles in diameter, bigger than our sun; while the tail may be 100,000,000 miles long. What is the tail made of? Why does it follow the comet, like sparks from a locomotive, when the comet is approaching the sun, and go before when the comet is receding from the sun? In the latter case the ancients called it more properly a beard. While a comet is so very huge, yet its mass or weight is very little. This can be seen when a star shines through its tail, or even through its head, the brilliance of the star is not dimmed in the least. Also when a comet passes close to a planet, the latter is not deflected a hair's breadth from its usual course, while the comet is pulled around by the planet to a very great extent. According to the law of gravitation, if the density of the comet were even like that of the lightest gas, the attraction which it would exert on a planet would be considerable.

Thus while a comet may be a million times as large as the earth, it may weigh only one-millionth part as much. In fact, it has been estimated that the amount of matter in the most perfect vacuum that we can produce with an air pump is greater than the average amount of matter in the same space in a comet. But it has not been determined whether the material of a comet consists of fine particles uniformly distributed or of larger and more solid bodies scattered at long intervals.

Comets are not like planets shining only by reflected light. They are really very brilliant, and do not appear to us when far away from the sun simply because they are then also far away from us. But strange to say, a comet does actually become more radiant as it comes nearer to the sun, and its tail also grows enormously larger at that time. And as the tail is always seen extending away from the sun, it is thought that minute particles are driven away from the comet's head into space either by light propulsion or by electric force. These particles never return again to the head, so that a comet is constantly growing smaller, though not in great proportion.

Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Hall's Distemper (Registered Trade Mark)

is a unique preparation and has the recommendation of leading sanitary authorities, architects, and decorators everywhere.

It may interest:—

THOSE WHO RUN, BUT CANNOT READ.

Coroebus was the first victor in the first recorded Olympic Games. Somewhere about 776 B.C., in fact.

Had we a newspaper report of the occasion handy we could say more about Coroebus.

If any one can lend us a copy we will take care of it and duly return it with some Co—(we nearly wrote Coroebus!)—"Commander" Cigarettes.

We should like to know:—

What was Coroebus' time for the 100 Yards Dash?

Did he do it in exactly 10?

Could Coroebus manage the Quarter in a round 50?

liberal lines, and American co-operation otherwise in the problem of European readjustment.

He is bewildered and disillusioned, and the possibly naive faith which animated him has undergone a somewhat rude shock. In order to be predisposed toward those accommodations on America's part which are indispensable to a satisfactory financial settlement and toward that comprehensive and broadgauged co-operation which the situation calls for, he will have to become affected with the impression of an attitude, a purpose, a spirit and a condition in Europe more nearly approaching than seems to him the existing state of things those conceptions which he believed the American nation was aiming and aiding to realize when it set out on its crusade to Europe in the Spring of 1917.

I am quite aware that the correctness of, and justification for, the views which I have endeavored to portray, will be questioned or denied, in whole or in part, by many of your readers. They will, indeed, be questioned or contested, at least in part, by not a few Americans. But the fact is, according to my observation, that these views and sentiments are widely prevalent among the masses of the American people, and it has seemed to me, as far as I can judge from this distance, that this state of mind and the reasoning from which it arises are not, perhaps, sufficiently realised among our English friends.

The causes of misunderstandings are usually reciprocal. It would, I venture to think, serve a useful purpose if an English chronicler, in a spirit of well-intentioned truthfulness, were to interpret to American readers the views and reasonings of the English "man in the street," as I have endeavored to interpret what I believe to be those which predominate in America at this time.

Earns $400 A Week Sewing On Patches

(New York Times)

Recently Fifth Avenue, a street of conventions, has taken up a fad in its shopping districts—the patch poster. When a crowd gathers before a shop window, usually where some kind of women's apparel is sold, it is safe to guess that there is a patch poster exhibited.

This new poster is made of textiles, usually has a background of some fine silk material with a broad edge of contrasting color, giving the effect of a frame, and on this background is mounted the figure of a woman, life sized, wearing real clothes, and all of the accessories. These are in what artists would call low relief, and are, so to speak, "patched" on, but the effect is realistic. On looking closely, one will see at the lower part of the poster the words "Cora Scovil, Patent Pending."

The patch poster is an interesting feature of modern advertising, for it illustrates in an effective way the things in women's wear which the shops are selling. The way Cora Scovil, an amateur, came to make it is an interesting story. Mrs. Scovil, who had dabbled a little in art during the war, turned her attention to poster making. After the war, Grant Mitchell, the actor, and a friend of the family, came to Pittsburgh, where Mrs. Scovil was living, and she decided to turn her newly developed talent to account and send him a theatrical poster. Through Mr. Mitchell she went into the business.

She was in a little town, just out of Pittsburgh, where there were few things to be bought and nothing in the way of drawing materials. The only thing that she could find in the house which might answer the purpose was a length of unbleached muslin, bought to cover an ironing board. With a textile foundation, she found that a treatment with texiles was better than paints and began to "patch" the portrait of the actor onto her muslin. She had a small piece of corduroy, which she used for the hair, after she had embroidered on the face, and she got masculine effects in clothing with different materials. The result was beyond her expectations and the work was fascinating.

She finished the Mitchell poster and did three more of other members of the company, and these were sent to the theater. They were intended for the amusement of the company in the dressing rooms, but were so well liked that they were sent down to the foyer and the next morning the author of what she thought was an amusing plaything was surprised to see in every paper, with the criticisms of the play, favorable comments upon the unique posters.

STORE WELCOMED IDEA

When some one suggested that she try to sell a poster to a big Pittsburgh department store, she did it with a bathing girl, who was exceedingly well received. The Pittsburgh display manager told her that her posters were just the thing for New York, and so it proved. Fifth Avenue took them up immediately and she has orders a long way ahead.

The artist sketches the subject to be reproduced. It may be a woman in a street gown, evening gown or bathing suit. One bathing suit poster advertises, not the suit, but a certain line of silk stockings and the poster lady, represented as leaping into the billowy waves, is actually wearing a pair of the stockings she advertise embroidered on the silken waves for realism.

Faces, with the neck and arms in decollete gowns, are made of flesh-colored satin, which gives more natural flesh tones than silk. Any material which will produce the results desired is used. Mrs. Scovil says that, having always made her own clothes, she has many odds and ends of materials that are of great value in her work. She uses the best and finest materials for the bodies of many of her costumes. An actress poster, in which an actual gown worn on the stage was copied, had material in it that cost $25 a yard. A poster woman wearing a black taffeta evening gown trimmed with black beaded lace, wore with it a band of the lace around the head, surmounted by a butterfly of jet.

ROBS OWN WARDROBE

"It was a butterfly I used to wear," says Mrs. Scovil, "but it was always too heavy.

"The long black jet chain worn with this frock was bought for the purpose and the poster lady wore openwork lace stockings that had a history.

"You remember those handsome lace stockings you gave me Christmas," the artist queried of a friend.

"Yes," said the friend, "I hope they fitted."

"They would," said the artist, "The artist originates her own designs, and so has no duplicates in styles. The bathing suit advertising the stockings is a pretty one of orchid silk with gray collar, cuffs and cap, and the hosiery is light in tone, running up into the orchid shades. Little fish "if I had had a chance to wear them, but I needed them one day for a poster lady, and you don't know how very well she looked in them!"

A smart street suit took in more of the artist's belongings. There was a little muslin vest that had been hers, the white kid gloves were filched from her top bureau drawer, the stockings and the Pomeranian dog that the poster lady had on a leash had all been hers.

There is a new poster of Grant Mitchell wearing a nifty checked coat for which the artist did not hesitate to rob other members of her family. She bought the black and white check material and made the coat herself, and also the string tie. The collar was cut from one of her husband's and the shirt, golf hat and trousers were his, taken intact.

"I hope my husband will not need his clothes before you have finished with them," she wrote in sending the poster.

Corduroy was used in this poster for hair, but with her women the patch poster artist uses fringe for dark hair and when she wishes a blonde or redhaired lady she uses colored knitting wools. All the features are put in with embroidery and there is often an outline of embroidery to the figure. The artist likes to be given at least a week to bring out a poster and the actual cost of one, when the family wardrobe has not been drawn upon too heavily, is $100 or more. They sell usually for $500. So far they have only been done individually for shops, and Fifth Avenue has monopolised most of them.

Five Of Banvard Co. Remain In Shanghai

Local play-goers will regret to learn that the Banvard Musical Comedy Company on finding it impossible to play a return season in Shanghai, passed through from Hankow recently en route to Manila, Singapore and India. The Company enjoyed successful seasons in Tientsin and Peking, which towns were visited twice, and also in Hankow.

No less than five members of the Banvard Company remain behind in Shanghai, including Miss Maude Lare (soprano), the leading lady. Miss "Billie" Kingsley is seriously ill in the Victoria Nursing Home whilst the Messrs. Heyes Brothers (violinist and jazz-drummer) and Norman Barrington secured local engagements. Miss Maude Lare's place will be difficult to fill, especially as Miss Kingsley was her understudy, but Mr. Banvard, having already agreed to the cancellation of this young lady's contract in order that she might settle in Shanghai, cabled to Australia for another artist to join him in the Philippines and accepted matters philosophically. The handsome presents showered upon Miss Lare by the entire company, including Mr. and Mrs. Banvard, testified amply to the high favor in which she is held by them all.

Olympic Games Special

PHILIPPINES AND JAPAN IN FINALS TODAY

Baseball Championship Of Orient To Be Decided This Afternoon

KEEN RIVALRY

China Loses To Filipino Team By Score Of 15 To 1

Japan is not going to take the chance of losing the Far Eastern championship in baseball on the outcome of today's big game with the fast Filipino nine. An arrangement was made yesterday between managers of the two teams to play a series during the present week, with the title to go to the winner of two out of three. Today's game will of course decide the championship of the 1921 Olympics, but it will also be counted in as the first of the three-game series.

The Japanese and the Filipinos, who have all along been conceded to have the real talent in Far Eastern baseball, were scheduled on the Olympic and open games program for but one game. They might meet again on Saturday in the open game final should they both win their way through the Thursday and Friday games with the Navy, the Infantry, the Marines and Shanghai. But the arrangement made yesterday will assure an undisputed settlement of claims to superiority in baseball.

The arrangement was broached by the Japanese. They did not wish to let the championship rest upon the sole game in which they might meet. They urged the series. And the Filipinos were quite willing. If Japan has great confidence in their Osaka Diamond baseball team so have the Manila men confidence in their eighteen players selected from the Bay League. There will be a keen rivalry at today's game, and more on the three-game series.

CHINA BADLY BEATEN

Fifteen to one is just about how China's Olympic baseball team stacks up with the nines of Japan and the Philippines. They lost their first game on Monday against the Japanese by 15 to 1, and they repeated their performance yesterday in their second Olympic effort against the fast Filipino team. That score was 15 to 1 also.

Before telling the tale of China's defeat it would be mete and fit to say a word for the little Chinese boys who got their team together on five days notice, practiced through a few minutes workout and then bravely set forth to conquer the best baseballers in the Orient.

They have class—lots of it, in spite of those fifteen-to-one defeats. They worked in flashes of brilliant fielding, and made an admirable effort at team work, considering their short playing acquaintance. Their two twirlers, Tyau and Ning were pitching real-enough baseball nearly all of the time. Their big weakness was with the willow: they couldn't drive in any runs. With a little practice to smooth off those ragged spots of fielding, and a little time to acquire the Babe Ruth knack of clouting out hits, they would put themselves on the Far Eastern baseball map.

China's two defeats by the same score of 15 to 1 might indicate that the two teams which will play off in the final, Japan and the Philippines, are evenly matched. But those 15 to 1 scores told nothing, and the issue of the big game is as much in doubt this morning as it was before the Olympic teams set sail for Shanghai.

The Japanese did not show their real class in their game of Monday against China. They merely mired through a soggy game and slipped into a big victory. And the Filipinos yesterday showed nothing. They started off with seven of their star men, and as soon as the game was won, which, by the way was in the second inning, they began substituting reserves until only four of the regulars were left in the lineup.

The Filipinos started off against China with a substitute second baseman in place of Platon who was injured in Saturday's game with Shanghai at the Race Course and with the star twirler, Belmonte, held back for tomorrow. At that they never had to extend themselves and the play devolved into a round of batting and run-getting practice.

The detailed play follows:

FIRST INNING

Filipinos—Hugo safe on Yang's

China's Star Basket Ball Team Looks Like The Winner!

We should say so! The Filipinos beat the Japanese and then these husky, Chinese lads beat the Manila braves. So when this team meets the Japanese today the victory for China should, if form counts, be rather easy.

Watching The Olympics Was A Frantic Pastime For Some Of Us Yesterday

Being The Plaint Of A Spectator, Ordinary Size, Who Spent The Afternoon At Hongkew Park

Coming out of the gate at Hongkew Park last evening, far beneath the crest of the outgoing wave, your investigator got kicked into a backwash, bumped over a long reef of knees and wooden clogs and was being swished rapidly toward the gate again in a brand new cross current when there was a slight break in the crowd, adjacent, through which he was propelled, bringing up against an embankment of bamboo palings. Scraping along this for some distance he came to a slight recess which had evidently been forced violently into the bulwark and, cowering therein, a strange figure leaning heavily a stout staff and glaring wildly upon the human flood which poured on by the while it muttered words which would have been cabalistic to anyone but an army mule driver.

Like the ancient mariner, this bent and dishevelled figure fixed the writer with a glittering eye as the latter, by a tremendous heave tore himself out of an eddy of kimonos and legs and wedged himself into the cove in the bamboo.

The original occupant with a final glistening, triangular remark fell silent and pulled the knot of a four-in-hand tie to center from a position abaft his right ear.

"You have been seeing the games?" said we, politely, and just by way of being polite and allowed to remain in this slight haven until the worst was over.

The original occupant turned upon us so baleful and withering a look that we fell eloquently silent again and shrank further into the crevice whereupon the original occupant's features relaxed somewhat, though his eye retained its glitter.

SAYS HE TO ME—

"I thought you were trying to kid me," he said. "I'll tell you about it."

Whereupon he recited the following, using a slow singsong sort of delivery, as if anxious to miss no details in a narrative of something which had occurred long ago.

"I got the afternoon off today, thinking I'd come out and see the Far Eastern athletes cavort. I arrived early and entered by the gate, where I delivered up my ticket, purchased in advance, and procured a program. I then proceeded into the park. Directly ahead of me I perceived a sort of barrier of blue canvas and an obliging policeman near the gate told me that tennis championships were being decided there.

"I used to be very fond of tennis and I thought that I would go over there and watch a few sets. As I have said, I came out early, but as I approached the tennis courts I saw that many people had come earlier. From the rear of the line of spectators I was just able to see the top of the referee's head as he sat perched on his high seat. I watched this for some few minutes, hoping to gain some idea of the stage and quality of the contest. But the referee was evidently a phlegmatic sort of person and the conversational pitch of his remarks was not sufficient to carry it through the barrage of Ningpo dialect in front of me. Presently a woman fained somewhere ahead and there was a slight break in the tiers of on-lookers. Being ordinarily more adroit and quick of foot than might now appear to you, I seized the opportunity to edge myself rapidly into the crowd and made good progress for a distance of about five feet when the resistance stiffened, or my strength failed, and I was unable to move another inch.

THE PROSPECT WIDENS

"I was now, however, within a couple of yards of the side lines and could see the referee quite plainly down as far as his collar. I found that by listening attentively I could every now and then catch one of his announcements and occasionally a high return would bring the ball into my zone of vision. The sun was very hot upon the back of my neck, as I had lost my straw hat in trying

PHILIPPINES AND CHINA WIN GAMES AT BASKETBALL

Frequent Fouls Lose First Game To China; Japan Outclassed

China and the Philippines each won in the basketball games played in connection with the Olympics at Hongkew yesterday. The game between the Islanders and China postponed from Monday was played at 11 o'clock in the morning. It resulted in a 30 to 27 win for China. The afternoon game between Japan and the Philippines was played on its regular schedule at 3:30 p.m. and the Nipponese lost by a score of 49 to 21.

The morning game was spoiled by the rough tactics of the Filipinos. They appeared on their opening play to have the advantage over China and had they played a straight game of basketball undoubtedly would have won. They disregarded the technical requirements of the game many times however and urged on by rough rooting from spectators, they became excited and soon were fouling deliberately.

Most of the fouls consisted of holding, though nearly every other barred variety of play was indulged in. One man even slugged a Chinese opponent. Four Philippine players were sent off the field because of fouling. It was said by basketball experts that the game began well enough, but that penalties for technical violations appeared to surprise the Filipinos. It was even said that they appeared not to know the inside requirements of play. The rough rooting of the on-lookers, with their "Kill the Umpire" business, excited the Southerners and they got into the game quite too seriously for clean sport.

Twenty-eight fouls were counted against the Filipinos, and eighteen of these were converted into goals. On straight goals from the floor the Filipinos counted ten as compared to China's 6. The fouls defeated the Filipinos.

In the afternoon game the Filipinos had the Japanese quite outclassed. Both teams played a clean, hard and aggressive game. The Japanese showed several flashes of brilliancy; they played the ball well but they lacked the experience and thereby lost. The Filipinos showed fine teamwork in this game, and, playing a hard, clean game, they won.

FARGAS BEATS NG IN SINGLES; TANAKA WINS

Filipino Champ Is Victor Over Man From Hongkong

DOUBLES TODAY

Tanaka Playing Ng; Good Tennis On This Afternoon

BY W. S. A. POTT

A large and enthusiastic crowd was on hand yesterday afternoon to witness the tennis despite the many other diversions that were being staged at the same time at Hongkew Park.

At 2:45 Okumura, No. 2 for Japan, started against F. Aragon, the second string singles player of the Philippine Islands. This match resulted in a well-earned victory for the Japanese player. He won the first set handily at 6-1. The Philippine player was wild and nervous and drove erratically. The little Japanese was content to allow his opponent to beat himself.

In the second set, Aragon found himself, and, by playing more steadily and coming to the net more often, managed to run out the set at 6-3.

It looked for a time as though he might win the match but Okumura captured the third and fourth sets both at 7-5, and the match at 6-1, 3-6, 7-5, 7-5.

It was anybody's match but the Japanese player was the steadier of the two and won on account of this. He has no net game nor is he a hard hitter, and had his opponent been a little less erratic, the result might have been different.

At 3:15 Fargas, No. 1 for the Philippines, and S. K. Ng, No. 1 for China, came on for the feature match of the afternoon. The former finally won a well-earned victory after four gruelling sets, 6-3, 8-10, 7-5, 6-4.

The wind was slightly troublesome for the players, but they both managed to lob and kill effectively despite the handicap.

First Set.

Both players started badly, losing their own services twice running. Fargas found his game sooner than his Chinese opponent, and after the games had gone to three all, ran off the next three games by good net play.

Fargas followed his service to the net and Ng, who relies more on accurate placing and short shots than speed, was unable to cope with the attack. It looked as though the Philippine player was going to have an easy time of it, but those who know Ng's style of play, were sure that he would recover.

Second Set.

With Fargas coming up aggressively, and getting in his clever net play and deadly back-hand volley, Ng saw the need of taking the net more frequently himself. This he began to do at the start of the second set winning his own service thereby without difficulty. Fargas followed suit and then broke through his opponent's service, so that he led up to 4-2.

It looked bad for Ng, but here he braced and with the aid of some clever gets, and sharp cross-courts, ran off three games in succession. Fargas was beginning to show the effects of his strenuous net attack, but he brought the score to 5-5 on his own service. Each player won his service to 8-8 before Ng broke through. Fargas made a final effort to break through and brought the score to deuce from 40-15. But Ng was playing too strongly and would not be denied, so that the next two points and the set fell to him.

This was the best set of the match. Fargas was too tired to follow each serve up to the net, and Ng frequently passed him well placed shots, chiefly cross-court, after having first

FILIPINOS WIN IN TRACK AND FIELD; JAPANESE ATHLETES BREAK SIX RECORDS; ALO GOES 11 FEET, 6 INCHES IN POLE VAULT

Splashes Of Color In Big Crowd At Olympic Games

BY ELSIE McCORMICK

We didn't think there was going to me much more to say about it today. It happens that although we are a fair baseball fan, we don't know a triple play from a double cross, and the only time we ever broke a record was when we dropped Galli-Curci. We feel lots more at home keeping the box-score at a meeting of a woman's club Literary Department than sharing press-space in front of the grand-stand with representatives of the Shun Pao or Asahi Shimbun on the occasion of an international athletic meet. We never find out what the score is until we get back to the office anyway. Besides, we were disappointed to find the sun shining, as we had thought up a lot of new lines about the weather and intended to pepper our copy with them.

Today, when we arrived at Hongkew Park, cars, ricshas, wheel-barrows, and one-horse shays were disgorging passengers like a New York subway entrance. Boy Scouts, equipped with canteens, thermos bottles, coils of rope, hatchets, and an etcetera or two debouched over the scenery, prepared for any emergency from rescuing a Pekinese from a burning building to scalping the enemy if so ordered. The only thing they didn't seem to have with them were potato mashers and hand grenades, but then as there were various bulges about their anatomy that couldn't have come entirely from physical culture, they may have had a few of these stored away also.

GIRL GUIDES ON JOB

Having passed the spot where "all the selected sportsmen of the different nations are welcomed," we tripped over the ropes of a few pup tents erected by the Chinese Girl Guides and followed a band that played a lively marching air in spite of a certain proportion of unripe notes. Anyway, it wasn't as bad as a band we listened to on shipboard once when a northeast monsoon was blowing. We had never heard sea-sickness set to music before, and we did exactly appreciate it, especially as we were at the stage of taking off a yellow and white sweater because it reminded us of fried eggs. We had a wonderful time on that voyage, though. There was a man who had a steamer-chair next to us—

But that hasn't anything to do with the Olympic. We had considerable difficulty convincing the guardian of the press-box that we were actually connected with a newspaper. It looked for a time as if he were going to put us through the Binet test, and decide, if we failed to make the grade, that we belonged in the press-box. The Binet test is composed of such questions as, "If your aunt was cross-eyed, would you miss a train?" Those who answer them correctly are feeble minded.

AN ORCHESTIA SEAT

Anyway, assisted by a Boy Scout, who was probably pledged to do one good deed a day, we staged a little track-meet of our own in the form of a dash over the hurdle which separated the press quarters from the common clay that paid for their seats. When we entered the enclosure, the Far Eastern occupants rose as one man—and promptly sat down again when the race they were watching was finished. We stood like the Statue of Liberty observing the picnickers riding to Staten Island or a

Yoshioka, Shanghai Boy, Wins Five-Mile Run By 880-Yard Margin; Toda Runs Half In 2:03 4-5; Catalon Wins Dashes

IN A NUTSHELL
TRACK AND FIELD

Philippines	54
Japan	34
China	6
SWIMMING
Japan	13
Philippines	5

Equalling or bettering eight of the Far Eastern track and field records, athletes from Japan, China and the Philippines completed their biennial meet yesterday afternoon with the honors topheavy for the Filipinos who scored 54 points. Japan, with her brilliant distance men, was second with 34 points and China was a poor third, scoring but six points. But China won two firsts for the first time since Olympics for Orientals came into being and a Chinese winning the high jump and another copping the discus portends something better in future meetings.

Japanese athletes busted four records. There was nothing incomplete about the shattering either, for Yoshioka cut nearly three minutes off the five mile mark hung up by his pal Ikuta at Manila two years ago; Toda went the half in 2:03 4-5, displacing Sayeki's time, 2:05 and Okazaki's 4:40 mile on Monday meant discarding Kuo's record which has stood since 1915. In addition to these a sturdy lad from Tokio, Asaoka by name, hung up a new mark for the javelin, tossing the thin stick 155 feet and two inches, a creditable performance.

The Filipinos had a hand in establishing new figures for Orientals to shoot at and at least one, Alo's height in the pole vault, should stand a while.

Alo leaped 11 feet and six inches, good college pole vaulting in the United States mind you, and the lad barely missed 12 feet, just brushing the bar enough to lose the honor of being the really outstanding performer of the meet, or at least sharing honors with the great little Yoshioka and the sterling miler Okazaki.

SIX RECORDS FALL

All the Filipinos and one Japanese went better than any previous distance in the broad jump, going over 22 feet and the first three men being separated by less than two inches. Santos won the event with a leap of 22 feet 2 1-2 inches.

Thus six marks, one of them standing since 1915, went by the boards in what was by far the best track and field meet ever seen in the Orient. From the minute that Catalon flashed the tape in 10 seconds in the 100 yard dash until Alo had vaulted his 11 feet, six inches, there were sparkling performances; excellent competition was seen by men well trained—unusually well trained for Orientals. The foreigners who were lucky enough to see the meet yesterday saw racing and field athletics that equalled many a small inter-college meet at home. Some of the performances were a bit better.

Catalon equalled the Far Eastern record for the 100 yard dash and won the 220 by inches, pulling a jump from his last stride which brought him the victory and allowed him to walk off the field with ten points. Escamos was the other Filipino to equal a record, going over the lows in 26 3-5 seconds.

The event that really brought the crowd to its feet was the five mile run when Yoshioka, a Shanghai lad, led his nearest competitor by over half a mile at the finish. As he started his third lap—he went 20—Yoshioka stepped out in front and was never headed, each lap showing him apparently stronger and the pistol at the 19th prompting a sprint that gave the lad an ovation from the stands. Sano, Hatakeyama and Ikuta, the previous record holder, followed Yoshioka in.

The half mile was another Japanese affair, three Nipponese taking the places by coming through from the 600 yard mark, Okazaki and Hasumi forcing Toda to a record 880. The distance runs were the Japanese forte. For all-around track and field men the Filipinos were better.

LOSE BY SLOW STARTING

Catalon and Castillon finished one, two in both sprints, Kaga of Japan getting third in both events; Filipinos walked away with the relays and Filipinos took first and third in both hurdles. Watanabe was second in both and this little Japanese shows more form and style than the Filipinos. He has the fault of every other short distance man flying Japan's colors. He nor Kaga know how to start. They were left in their holes when the Filipinos were slipping away with the bark of the pistol. When this is remedied, Watanabe will be a crack hurdler and Kaga will be faster. Incidentally one of the Filipinos is a seven-strike hurdler, the first the writer ever saw in the East.

The Philippines collected nine points in the jumps, winning all three places and establishing a record in the broad and getting second and third in the high. Yuan Chin-hsiang of China copped the high jump with a leap of five feet, 7 5-7 inches and narrowly missed a new record of five feet, nine inches.

The pole vault was all Manila, Alo jumping 11;6, Carlos doing 11 feet and Nicolas going 10 feet, six inches.

China and Japan cut in on the weights, Nakamura winning the shot, Asaoka taking the javelin and Tu Jung-tang finishing first in the discus throw. Filipinos got second and third in all three events and it might be noted that Alo was third in the shot, Nicolas and Lucas were the other Philippine point winners.

The pentathlon is on the cards for today and for the benefit of the layman who does not follow track athletics too closely, it might be said that the event is an all-around competition of five events: shot put, 220 yard dash, discus throw, broad jump and mile run.

China's hopes for this afternoon Chu En-te and Tu Jung-tang, were first and second two years ago at Manila. Sato and Kazawa will be factors for Japan while Danao and Coscolluela will show well for the Philippines.

And if you have read this far we insist on putting in one more line for the little Chinese ladies who will entertain with group games this afternoon. It will be an unusual sight.

Here are the complete results of the track and field meet:

waitress in a Child's restaurant pausing until a customer finds out whether or not there is an "r" in the month and he can order oysters. Finally another Boy Scout cleared up his deed record for the day by furnishing a chair and we saw the rest of the events from the second row in the orchestra.

There was the same type of crowd massed on the grandstand as jammed it Monday, the same Japanese students with brass buttons and pointed caps, the same little ladies hiding behind a screen of rice powder, and the same proportion of Chinese in silk gowns who unfortunately had little opportunity to cheer. What impressed us most was the fact that every one of those who crowded the matshed grandstand to its shaky top paid the good sum of one dollar for the privilege of standing on about six inches of plank, besides the fifty cents they moulted at the entrance. If the Chinese, who are so thrifty that they used to transact most of their business with coins composed chiefly of ventilation, pay $1.50 to witness a track-meet, it means that they must like it at least $150 worth.

FIELD IMPROVED

Outside of the fact that the field had lost its custard pie consistency, its general aspect differed little from that of Monday. Some of the Japanese athletes furnished an unannounced event by waiving the formality of a dressing-room and doing their dolling-up opposite the geometric center of the grandstand, and then there were the two phonographs that announced the winners in the general style of "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" sung by Billy Murray. Co-lum-bia Record." The Filipinos present displayed one of the effects of American occupation by a bit of organised rooting. They registered good sportsmanship by treating the Japanese team to a series of "rah-rahs," and though the Japanese seemed a bit doubtful as to what it meant, they proved they were game sports also by telling the Filipinos that they were rah-rahs themselves.

But underneath the blare of the bands, the crack of the pistol, and the cheering of the crowd was a note of more serious significance. No group of diplomats gathered about a council table, no secret treaties signed behind closed doors, no formal messages of good will exchanged between governments can have half as much influence in promoting understanding between the peoples concerned than athletic gatherings such as the Far Eastern Olympics.

Out of the rivalry on track, field and diamond is born a comaradine which, though often unacknowledged, may nevertheless prove to a power in affairs of much greater moment. People who play together, event once every two years, cannot bear the same unrelenting malice of those who meet only officially and where each representative is trying to empty some diplomatic knockout drops into his neighbors' coffee.

Fellowship Meeting

A fellowship meeting of athletes and students from Japan, the Philippines and China will be held this morning at 9:30 o'clock at the Free Christian Church, corner Range and Chapoo Roads.

Dr. T. H. Lee, President of Futan University, will preside.

Five minute speeches will be delivered by Mr. S. Kondo, Japan; Mr. Camilo Osias, Philippines and Mr. D. Z. T. Yui, China.

T. Kato, Japan, George Woo, China, both athletes, will also speak.

A duet will be sung by Miss E. Ling Tong and Mrs. Chen, while Mr. L. T. Chen will give a vocal solo.

A brief report of the World's Students Christian Federation meeting in Switzerland will be given by Dr. John V. Lee.

Watching The Games Is Strenuous Sport For Us Short Fellers

to force my way to the edge of the court, and a large man wearing wooden shoes built on the order of a viaduct was standing with both cleats resting upon my instep.

"Try as I might I felt my interest in the game weakening, and finally, I begged the pardon of the man who was standing upon my foot and said that I thought I would go over and watch some of the track events, which I judged by the cheering that floated over from the grandstand, must be closely contested. The man said something in a word of nine syllables and obligingly removed his foot after I had tugged at my own two or three times, but I then discovered that I was scarcely better off, as the crowd behind had taken on six or seven additional layers of people since I had arrived and these seemed to dovetail into the mass as though fitted by a cabinet maker. By pausing at intervals for rest I managed to reach the outskirts, where I took time to trim neatly off with my penknife the frayed stumps of thread marking the places where my coat buttons had formerly been. I then made my way to the grandstand.

OFF TO THE TRACK

"Observing an opening in the enclosure's southern end I went there and presented my ticket but was told that I must go to the rear of the grandstand, as the ticket entitled me to a grandstand seat. I did so. Behind the stands I saw three funnel-shaped gatherings of people, which I took to denote the existence of three separate entrances. I selected the lesser of these and joined it, taking the precaution to unbutton my waistcoat, and after a little time I saw that I had been right in my conjecture that this was an entrance to the stands for I found myself being borne along through a narrow passageway and by looking up I could see a matting roof and knew that at last I was actually inside the pavilion. We made quite admirable progress, as I now realise, for some minutes and by standing on tip-toe I could see daylight ahead and gathered that we were nearing the front of the structure, which one must reach it seems in order to obtain access to the tiers of seats.

"To the best of my judgment I was within a yard of the passageway at the front of the seats when the procession halted and a couple of Boy Scouts crossed their staffs just before me. We swayed there for a while and from the conversation in front I finally made out that the stands were full and that no more people were to be permitted to enter. By unbuttoning my collar and twisting my head around to either side I managed to get a fair panorama of the seating area of the place and though no one was sitting I could see that the capacity was indeed being strained.

THAT 220-YARD DASH

"There were three elbows steeplechasing over my lower ribs, which were the more unprotected by reason of my unbuttoned coat and waistcoat having floated off in a sort of wake to the rear, and a large number of persons on all sides of me had dined heavily on garlic this noon, but I reflected that I was near the fore part of the structure and that I might as well remain and see something at least of one event. I wasthe more strengthened in this resolve by hearing someone above me remark that the next feature was to be the final of the 220-yard dash, which I particularly wished to see.

"I could hear the report of the starting pistol quite distinctly and I began counting mentally, knowing that in approximately 20 seconds the runners should flash by the narrow aperture ahead of me, and I planned to stand as far atip-toe as possible at that moment in order to catch a glimpse of the sprinters' heads as they passed. This latter part of my plan I was compelled to abandon at the last instant by reason of the man in front of me backing suddenly and planting both heels upon my toes. My gaze was therefore limited in its elevation to the neckerchief of a Boy Scout standing a few feet before me. He had three moles on his neck and there was a slight tear near the edge of his bandanna.

"I heard someone remark that the race had been won by the Filipino Catalon, but I regret that I am unable to confirm this for you.

"At this juncture a man weighing approximately 250 pounds decided that he was not going to stay any longer in the passage way and turning violently around he began heaving himself through the crowd behind. With admirable presence of mind I attached myself to him and in a few minutes was dragged out into the open air.

HO FOR THE FOOTBALL

"A number of people came out of the grandstand while I was reclining against a small tree fanning myself and wondering if the shoemaker would be able to plug up the dents in my toes; but somehow I could not make up my mind to go inside again and see if they had left any vacancies.

"I happened to catch a remark made by a man to his companion to the effect that the football game was shortly to start and recollected that I had very much wished to witness this number of the program. I followed the man across the field to what looked like a Roman phalanx composed of most of the populations of all the other nations. There was a small stand at one side with people trying not to fall over the edges and by following the direction of their gaze I could tell that there must be a hollow to the phalanx. I also learned from one of the percher on the stand that the game had not started yet, but probably would do so within a few minutes. Going along two sides of the human rectangle I came finally to a spot where the line was thin enough to permit me a glimpse of part of the field and stationed myself there with the intention of working my way up to the line of the playing area.

"I do not expect you to believe me when I tell you that I actually succeded in accomplishing this feat. Looking back upon it I seems scarcely credible to me. Nevertheless it is a fact, and a the referee blew his whistle for the kick-off I was in the very front line. As the whistle sounded, however, a knot of people not engaged in the game, but who had been roaming about the field, started hastily for the side lines. As you have already guessed, they headed direct for me, and after they had flattened themselves into legal alignment with the boundary mark I found myself removed by several strata from all possibility of seeing the game. To clinch the matter the second row of the new arrivals in front unfolded camp stools, placed them in compact order just in front of me and stood upon them.

AND MOREOVER

"A Chinese youth punctuated a protracted college yell, by punching me in the back with the staff of a five-barred pennant. The effect would have been the same, I suppose, had it been any other kind of a pennant. A Chinese infant evidenced its enthusiasm for the game by reaching out from its parent's arms and kicking me behind the ear. And then the camp stool directly in front of me collapsed and I recall trying to dodge to one side.

"The kind faced gentleman who was sprinkling me with lemon soda told me that it had taken five minutes to get me out of the crowd and that the Chinese had scored one goal and asked me if I intended to witness the baseball game, adding that it had just begun.

"Inquiring the way to the diamond I————"

At this point your investigator tore his eyes from the hypnotic ditto of this tiresome and palpably tireless windbag and, noting that the jam at the gates had vanished, kicked the narrator's staff far out of reach and fled.

Sailors Arrested On Assault Charge

Two American marine engineers from the steamer Wenatchee were arrested last night for assaulting a Chinese newsboy and a Sikh policeman just outside the Palace Hotel. The men are E. F. Gratton and A. W. Welsh. Both were detained in custody and will appear in the American Court today. According to the report made the men first assaulted the newsboy, after he had given them a paper for which they did not pay, and then attacked the policeman when he interceded.

SAYS "BUGS"

Baer:

DON'T BE FOOLED BY HONEST FACTS

Once Again We Ask Public Not To Judge Depth Of Well By Length Of Pump Handle

BY 'BUGS' BAER

Dear Sir: I notice that one J. Francis Ward takes his Waterman in tow to buzz you some lies. Another bird drags his pencil around by the rubber in an effort to discredit my man. I can't read or write. But I take my stenographer in my lap to write that they are all wrong.

Your eccentric dancer, Gink Fowler, seems to forget the tanning and hiding he received before a crowd of hobnailers in the hard-boiled coal belt of Pennsylvania. His opponent was Clinkers Jones. Clinkers used to spar with mutes. He would let the underground colts whale away with both hoofs. He had gloves made of muleskin. One poke on the button and Gink started to measure off canvas by the yard.

Do you remember?

AL GERRITY,
Scranton.

A flock of towels flying north through the ropes is diplomatic concession on the part of the opponents of Gink Fowler. Nobody ever tossed the Turkish battle flag in for Ginkus. The boy with the porous knit jaw was like an old fire hoss. The sound of the gong would send him clattering out of the ring and rattling down the easiest and longest street.

Strange thing about the mat in the Roughtown abattoir ring. It was closely interwoven, and had "Welcome" engraved on it in large agate type. Gink was very near-sighted, and had to get his eyes close to the mat in order to read the official summons. Some folks claim that they used to see Gink digging clams during a tough fight.

HOUND FOR DETAILS

This is easily explained. Gink was a hound for details. Sometimes he got the idea that the ring wasn't the orthodox Cheesebury length of twenty-four feet. So he would volplane to the parade grounds and measure off the distance with his nose.

It was this technical indifference to routine that made Gink the champion that he wasn't. He may have played leapfrog with the large lumps of resin. But we can explain everything away easy. He was a master of strategy. Whenever the Champion threw a chin toboggan he was luring his opponent on to certain destruction.

Whenever the Champ jumped through the ropes and hotdodged it up the aisle he had plans. He told these plans and specifications to nobody. His silly antagonist would wait around in the ring for Gink to come back. At the end of three watchful days of waiting he would have to admit that Gink had out-generaled him.

BROKE THE WRONG PIECE

Brute science must always beat kewpie strength. He didn't have a very big head. When a child he was very curious and got his skull caught in the keyhole of a door. They didn't know whether to crack Gink's skull or bust the lock. Finally they sacrificed the keyhole. His head looked like an unripe berry. But then, you shouldn't judge a popular song by the words and music.

Gink tossed Clinkers Jones over his shoulder like spilled salt. Clinkers was just an unverified rumor. Thirty punches and out like a commutation ticket on the last day of the month.

Then Gink gritted his one tooth, clamped his jaws in determination and set out after The Glutt.

knows all that there is to be known about food values and stimulant values. There is the centre (probably the world centre) of cultured scientific study of how to keep life alive and how to keep life healthy.

An agent for Haig & Haig who trades extensively in the West End of London informs us that not many weeks pass without orders coming from Harley Street doctors for our whisky.

They know what they are doing. Life can be saved (and often is saved) by the timely use of fine stimulant.

When "control" is banished in the Home Market the price of Haig & Haig Whisky will be higher there than other Whiskies. In all uncontrolled markets the higher price is now being paid. That is one of the reasons why Haig & Haig is a scarce commodity in the Home Market.

Chinese Soccer Stars Break Filipino Defense; Win By Score Of 1 To 0

BY "WHISTLE"

This is only the second time that Olympic Games have been held in Shanghai, so perhaps it is unfair to be too critical of the authorities. But it must be pointed out that the arrangements for the Association Football match were totally inadequate. The side lines were not strong enough, necessitating the frequent stoppage of the game while Boy Scouts bravely wrestled with a perspiring crowd.

A small stand was provided for which a charge was made, but it was perfectly easy to climb up free, and a strong effluvia of garlic is not desired by foreigners who are willing to pay for a seat.

The scheduled start was at 3.30. Before 3, the lines were packed 8 deep, and then the game did not start until 35 mins. after the advertised time. The authorities must realise that Football is a popular game and will always draw a large crowd.

The team representing China was composed of S. China players with one exception, the outside left, Wu Yen-chong belonging to Fuhtan College. Fuhtan played a pointless draw with the S. China team a few days ago, and on the day's play, several Shanghai players from Nanyang, St. John's and Fuhtan would have been useful.

China kicked off against a side wind with the sun in their backs and were not long in attacking the Filipino goal. The right wing was going well and putting good stuff across, but the center forward, very clever with his head, seemed to forget his feet, so the goal was not very often in danger from him.

The Filipinos were playing well, the goalie especially, he saved from one melee in the goal mouth in a perfectly miraculous manner.

The China defense which was excellent, soon smothered the attackers who were bustled out of their clever tactics, though they got one break away, the outside right beating one back and working well in, shot past the upright.

With all their chances China failed to score in the first half, they were playing too many high kicks dear to the heart of the Chinese gallery and with the light ball this was useless.

On the restart the Chinese team showed their superiority in tackling and kicking, but all their shots went too high.

The wings were combining well but the center kept on spoiling the effort.

Their only goal came from a fine pass from the right wing.

The inside left steadied himself and fairly beat the goalie with a cross shot low down.

Immediately, after another pass from the right was finely headed in but the point was ruled offside, and a fine goal was lost.

Corner succeeded shot, and shot, corner but everything went west, the center failing to keep the ball low near goal.

The rest of the game developed into desultory kicking and continuous foul play, and a good deal of ill feeling was displayed.

The local fans must learn that it is not sportsmanlike to jeer at an opponent when he is being carried off, laid out by a bad foul from one of their men.

Mr. W. G. Clifford refereed, and handled a most difficult game very well.

Another suggestion to the authorities is to have the teams printed. Though the players have numbers they do not all wear them, and it is impossible to get all those that are worn. With a crowd of three or four thousand, this is a concession that might well be made.

The winners are a strong team, specially in the defense, the center half back is a class player, but they need a new center who can shoot.

Open Tennis Tourney Cancelled; Olympics Continues To Friday

The open tennis tournament (singles and doubles) is cancelled. The decision was made last night and was reached after a careful study of the chances of completing the tournament. Owing to the rain on Monday, to the large entry, and to the fact that the Far Eastern Olympic matches cannot be speeded up so as to finish before Friday afternoon, the Tennis Committee of the Olympic Games has decided not to attempt to play off the open tournament matches.

The entry fee will be refunded.

AUSTRALIANS CAPTURE FIRST CRICKET MATCH

Test Game Goes To Visiting Eleven By Ten Wickets

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 30.—The first test match was resumed today at Nottingham, in unsettled weather and before an attendance numbering some 18,000 spectators. The wicket was slow.

The Australians, whose score on Saturday stood at 167 for six wickets, concluded their first innings for 232. The scoring was slow and the fielding poor. Woolley took three wickets at a cost of 46 runs.

The English team in their second innings made 147, Knight contributing 38 and Woolley 34. Macdonald took five wickets for 32, and, in contrast to their opponents, the Australians fielded splendidly.

The Australians, by hitting up 30 without loss, won the match by ten wickets. Scores:

England first innings 112; Australia first innings 232; England second innings 147; Australia second innings 30 for no wicket.

Game With Huron Team Postponed

The baseball game scheduled between the Shanghai Civilians and the Huron men for this afternoon has been postponed until after the Olympic and Open Games of this week. The Flagship will remain in port until June 20 at least so that there will be ample time later to finished out the five game series between the two teams. The series now stands with two games straight won by the sailors.

The Shanghai Baseball Club team will play its next game in the Open Games championships at Hongkew park on Friday. The game is scheduled as the second of the afternoon's bill.

The winners of the Infantry-Filipino game of Thursday will oppose the local men. If Shanghai wins it will get into the finals on Saturday.

All of the American teams entered in the Open Games are hard at practice at the Race Course. The team from the Gunboat Monocacy is assisting in the work of rounding the Americans into shape. A game will be played today between the Monocacy and the Marine Legation Guard from Peking at 1 p.m., after which the gunboat men will go through a practice with the Huron team.

The Shanghai men are due for practice at 5 p.m. today and tomorrow at the Race Course. All players are urged to be out for these last two days of practice before the big championships at Hongkew park.

The president of the Shanghai Baseball Club has issued a request to all employers of Shanghai baseball players that they release candidates for the team on Friday afternoon so that they will be free to play in the Open Games.

Players are requested to be ready in uniform at the Club House on the Race Course Friday at 3:15 p.m. sharp when they will be taken by motor cars to the Hongkew grounds.

Tennis Doubles On This Afternoon; Ng Beaten By Fargas

maneuvered his adversary out of position with a deep lob.

Third Set.

Ng led at 2-0 in the third set, owing to Fargas's temporary wildness. But he steadied down and won his own serve and then broke through his opponent's by well-earned aces at the net. He won the next two games, and then Ng retaliated with three successive games.

With the score 5-4 and 30-love on his own service it looked like Ng's set. Fargas rallied, and Ng appeared exhausted, so that the former ran off the next two games and then the final game at love on his own service, bringing the set to a close with a service ace, for which Ng did not even make an attempt.

Fourth Set.

After the customary seven minutes rest, play was resumed and the large gallery began to feel that it was Fargas's match if he had the endurance. The style of play that he was using was taking it out of him, and the easier play of Ng promised to tell in the long run.

Ng started off by taking his own serve after giving a double. At 1-1, Fargas broke through, but Ng immediately followed suit, Fargas giving the game away on a double fault. Fargas again broke through twice in succession and led at 5-2.

Both players were very tired, and their shots were short. At this point the Chinese player, who is never beaten until the last stroke, made a gallant fight to bring the score to deuce. He just failed and Fargas won his own service and the match at 6-4.

Ng played a clever game, but Fargas was too aggressive, and Ng did not have enough speed on his forehand to beat him consistently at the net. Ng was generally successful when he came up, and should not have allowed the Philippine player to take such complete possession of the barrier.

Tanaka Beats Tyau

The last match of the afternoon was between Tanaka of Japan and Tyau, No. 2 for China. The hard hitting little Japanese had little difficulty disposing of his opponent at 6-2, 6-2, 6-0.

Matches For Today

This morning at ten o'clock the following matches will be played:

Fargas (P.I.) vs. Okumura (Japan).

Aragon (P.I.) vs. Tyau (China)

In the afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock, Tanaka (Japan) will play Ng (China), in the singles and Suarez and Fargas (P.I.) will oppose Asano and Kitagawa (Japan), in the doubles. The afternoon's play should be productive of fine tennis.

On Saturday afternoon, if the Olympic matches are over, there will be an exhibition doubles match arranged by invitation between Suarez and Fargas, the crack Philippine pair, and Toussaint and Pott.

FRENCH CLUB MEETING

A general meeting will take place at the Cercle Sportif Francais today at 5:30 p.m. All members who are interested in the building of the new club are requested to attend.

Demonstration By Girls Is Feature Event Today

Today, June 1, marks a big day in the calendar of Chinese women as it is the first time in the history of China that Chinese women have ever taken part in an athletic event such as the Far Eastern Olympic Games.

The idea as worked out in the program for the afternoon was that games should be demonstrated such as could be played by every girl in China without special equipment and training.

In preparing for this event there was organised by Miss Celia Moyer of the Y.W.C.A. Physical Training School, a leaders class made up of representatives of the seventeen competing schools who met together twice a week for five weeks at the local Y.W.C.A.

These girls in turn trained the other girls of their respective schools. Three of the students in training at the Y.W.C.A. Physical Training School have gone as leaders into the schools for which no representatives could be sent to the leaders class.

The sight of 1,000 Chinese girls in mass drill should be one to thrill all those interested in the future of the women of China.

Chinese Win Two Volley Ball Games

China smashed over two straight games of volleyball off the Japanese at the Olympic games yesterday, by clever passing up to the net and driving over and down to open spots on Japan's side. The first game resulted 21-3, and the second 21-0.

China's win over Japan today was about of the same strength of win as that of the Filipinos over Japan on Monday but their smashing game and extremely clever and aggressive style of play ranks them as a slight favorite in today's play-off against the Philippines.

Mr. J. Bradshaw refereed yesterday's games assisted by Linesmen K. P. Chao and Nishimura.

Mixed Doubles Go To Mr. Toussaint And Mrs. Farbridge

In the first round of the Shanghai Tennis Association 1921 play, begun yesterday afternoon on the course of the French Club, the mixed doubles between Mr. Toussaint and Mrs. Farbridge, and Mr. Knowles and Miss Coutts resulted in a win for the first named paid, 6-4, and 8-6.

The games were closely contested, and good tennis was played by the four players participating. Miss Coutts played a very pretty game with Mr. Knowles, attracting considerable favorable comment for a young player.

Mr. Fawcett refereed.

Japan's Swimmers Leading Filipinos; China Is Not Placed

Another large crowd turned up last night at the Municipal Bath to witness the second stage of the Far Eastern Swimming Championships, an even larger crowd than Monday's—so large, in fact, that the Fire Department, in view of the inadequate egress afforded by the turnstiles at the main door, refused to allow any more spectators after 9.15, though quite a big crowd were awaiting admission outside.

The evening was another triumph for Japan, who got all their first places in the 440 yards and third in the 50 yards. In the 100 yards (back stroke) Japan qualified five men and the Philippines only one. In the mile race (70 lengths of the bath, plus 30 feet) Japan got first, second and third.
